The Desert Dripping Wet
Ina Claire and Harpo
Diligent Paul Block
Pope's Talk to the World

By Arthur Brisbane

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 14—The desert of northern Arizona at 6 o'clock this morning presented an unusual appearance. No brilliant sun rising far above the tracks. Instead, heavy clouds almost touching the ground. The desert soaked with rain, water pouring from the hills. Green filigree covering desert sands. Fresh green cactus, sage brush and grease wood. Rain has been falling in all the desert region and heavy snow in the mountains promises good crops.

Interesting sights inside the train, if you tire of looking through the window at nature. In her stateroom sits Ina Claire, who acts. Now on her way to the movies, she plays backgammon with Mr. "Harpo" Marx, who also acts.

The Los Angeles Examiner, boarding the train early, tells you that Ina Claire says she is living apart from her husband, John Gilbert, also a screen actor, because "there is something fascinating about separation" and, says Miss Claire:

"We are both stars and temperamental. Two such persons in the same house is bad for happiness in marriage."

Astronomers will tell Miss Claire that there are in the firmament stars even bigger than any in Hollywood, "double stars," that travel through infinite space and time together happily.

On the train also is J. O. Jernigan, first-class flier, who drove the plane that towed Captain Hawks, today's best flier in America, from San Diego to New York, Hawkes sitting in a glider.

Mr. Jernigan, who has been flying ever since he entered the war, believes that aviation is on the verge of something new and entirely different from anything ever seen before. Undoubtedly he is right. Men do not solve problems by imitating birds or other animals. They develop ideas of their own, invent new things surpassing anything that Mother Nature can do. The present airplane is only an imitation of an eagle and does not work as well.

The boy in "Excelsior," whose eye beneath shone like a falchion from its sheath, was a pale imitation of Paul Block of New York, Toledo, Pittsburgh and points East, West, North and South. He now extends his newspaper chain to the Pacific, purchasing the Los Angeles Express.

Dr. Frank Barham, publisher of the Los Angeles Herald, and George Young of the Los Angeles Examiner, intrenched like two "old men of the mountain," will give Block a fight. But Block will make a conquest. It is as natural for him to do that as it is for the rolling mercury to carry along small particles of gold with it. What the magnet is to iron, Block is to business and profits.

Hundreds of millions listened to the Pope broadcasting Thursday. Protestants will note with deep interest, and Catholics with great pride, the fact that the Papacy reigns through the centuries.

A great German emperor crossed the Alps in the dead of winter in the middle ages and stood penitent in the snow day after day below the window of the Pope begging forgiveness. The Pope could not have addressed the world in tones of greater authority than those used by Pope Pius Thursday.

The Pope spoke "in the name of the prince of apostles by divine command," and most impressive was the Pope's invocation:

"Hear, oh heavens, that which I shall say and listen, oh earth, to the words of my mouth."

To the "bishops and priests and laity laboring as the apostles prescribed" the Pope said:

"You are the people of God, the royal priesthood, the holy nation."

Tens of millions of Catholics in the United States will treasure with great pride that address, full of the consciousness of earthwide authority and power.

Married ladies here are answering a newspaper question, "Can you possibly raise a family on $40 a week?" One lady says it is not possible on less than $60. Another lady raises four children well on $35 a week beside paying for the arrival of the fourth, and is much praised.

Meanwhile millions of mothers continue raising families on less than $27 a week and are praised by nobody, not even by their husbands.

Additional news and pictures of General Edwards Pages 2, 5 and 8.

Maj.-Gen. Clarence R. Edwards, beloved leader of the Yankee Division, lost his valiant battle with death at 7:06 a. m. today. He passed on with a smile on his lips.

At his bedside were his sister, Mrs. Charles A. Otis, of Cleveland, her husband, two doctors and three nurses.

With tears streaming down their faces they stood helpless while the famous veteran warrior breathed his last.

SMILED AT DEATH

Mrs. Otis was unable to make any statement when she came from the deathbed, but her husband said, "Gen. Edwards just closed his eyes, smiled and stopped breathing."

News of the death of the beloved leader flashed through Phillips House of Massachusetts General Hospital to the group of newspapermen keeping the last night of their vigil.

Even the veteran reporters choked as the news came.

Brought to the hospital a month ago on the advice of his personal physician, Dr. Arthur N. Worthington, General Edwards was immediately operated upon to remove an intestinal obstruction.

He rall ed from the shock of the operation, and for many days fought a battle which ebbed and flowed.

SCORES OFFER BLOOD

The strength of the General kept waning, and three blood transfusions were resorted to, the first last Tuesday.

When the call for volunteers went out, hundreds of his former "doughboys" flocked to his aid. Even today five men stood by to give their blood.

Guy Watts of Roslindale, a former sergeant of the 104th Infantry, was selected for the first transfusion. Immediate improvement in the General's condition was noted.

SOCIETY FLIER FINED $50

Charles P. Paine, 22, scion of a famous and wealthy Boston family and a lineal descendant of a signer of the Declaration of Independence, today played the role of a "serenading aviator" in the Waltham District Court and for that distinction he paid a fine of $50.

Young Paine denied that he flew his ship very low to serenade from the moonlight and heavenly skies Hope Mary Potter, the light of his life, to whom 10 days ago he announced his engagement.

But Judge P. Sarsfield Cunniff disagreed with the modern swain. He found the moonlight responsible for many things. And in Paine's case he also found the moonlight responsible for the youthful low flying over Newton and Weston, found him guilty and fined him the $50.

Testimony revealed that around 1 a. m. several days ago, the millionaire aviator left the Marlboro hangar, and flew over Newton Center, cutting a figure eight over the residence of his fiancee, then proceeding on to Weston.

Paine is the son of Mrs. Guy Cox and the late Charles P. Paine. He attended Middlesex school, Concord; New Preparatory school, Cambridge, and Harvard College.

CHAPLIN HAPPY AS HE SAILS

Copyright, 1931, by Universal Service, Inc.

New York, Feb. 14—With the laughter of 2000 Sing Sing prisoners ringing in his ears, Charlie Chaplin sailed for London aboard the Mauretania, to attend the British premier of his new picture, "City Lights."

The scene was different Thursday night.

It was midnight at Sing Sing.

A huge black car crept through the outer gates.

"Whew!" said America's favorite film comedian, fanning himself with his derby—"they'll never make a lawbreaker out of me."

He had just come from a visit to the gray-clad men within those grim stone walls, where he talked to them a few minutes and treated them to a private exhibition of his newest film.

"They stopped me on the way out," said Mr. Chaplin. "They cried—Atta boy, Charlie! Great show, Charlie! O. K., Charlie!' God—it must be awful to be shut up in walls like those."

As the car sped noiselessly along the winding wooded road from Ossining Chaplin waxed expansive.

"If I can make people laugh," he said, "that's all I want to do. Laughter is the best medicine in

Sorrowing Friends Pay Edwards Tribute

Expressions of sorrow at the death of Maj.-Gen. Edwards were voiced by military, political and social leaders throughout the city, State and nation today.

GOV. JOSEPH B. ELY—It is my painful duty to announce to the people of Massachusetts and the nation the death of that distinguished soldier and citizen, Maj.-Gen. Clarence R. Edwards. Massachusetts mourns the passing of her beloved son, fearless in war, a father in peace and always mindful of America's ideals. His eminence in life will not surpass the love and reverence of generations yet to come. As a tribute to this gallant soldier, I have ordered that the flags on all public buildings be at once placed at half-staff, there to remain until after the funeral.

MAYOR JAMES M. CURLEY telegramshed the following tribute from Palm Beach, Fla.: The death of Gen. Edwards is a genuine loss to the American nation. He was an illustrious soldier and a militant patriot unselfishly serving every righteous cause for the welfare of our country. He wielded an army of inexperienced soldiers of New England into one of the most important military forces of the United States upon the fields of France in the greatest war the world has known. He served these men with the fidelity and devotion of a father and was a constant and inspiring adviser both abroad and at home. Gen. Edwards fought in the open for every cause which he believed right and was never known to retreat. The sorrow which attends his death will be shared by our citizens in every walk of life. A valiant soul has passed away who gave his all for the welfare and betterment of his fellow men. His services entitle him to the same welcome in Heaven that he was ever accorded in his beloved Massachusetts.

FORMER PRESIDENT COOLIDGE—In connection with the large number of New England friends of Gen. Edwards, I am grieved at his death. He especially endeared himself to the people of this region. He commanded the 26th Division, made up of the old militia of our six States, which was the first volunteer organization to be sent to the World War.

He was fortunate in the admiration and affection which the man in his command had for him. He will be remembered not only as a distinguished army officer, but as a man who had a friendly interest in all those who had served under him.

LIEUT.-COL. WILLIAM J. BLAKE, Director of Veterans Bureau: The "old man" has passed on, but he is not dead. He will live forever in the hearts of every man who had the honor of serving under him. He will live in the hearts of every man whose friend he was. What a reception he will get in heaven from his "gang" who died for their country and whose memory he has constantly told the people of New England never to forget.

MAJ.-GEN. FOX CONNER, commandant 1st Corps Area—I am certainly very, very sorry to hear of the death of Maj.-Gen. Clarence Edwards. I join with the officers and men of the regular army and with all New England in mourning his passing.

CARROLL SWAN, speaking for the YD Veterans' Association—We all hoped, right along, that the "old man" was going to get better. His death comes particularly hard because, during the last few days, we felt he had improved and we had planned the greatest demonstration this town ever had seen, in the event that he did. Thousands of his Yankee Division veterans were going to escort him back to his home in Dedham to demonstrate the great love they felt for him.

I don't know whether it is generally realized, but every single man who has come into the YD club during the past days has willingly volunteered to undergo a transfusion of blood to save his life. This shows the feeling they all contained for him in their hearts. All through the war "Daddy" Edwards showed regard and affection for his men that no other general, in my opinion, evinced. For that reason he realized they had hearts and souls, like the officers, and could suffer just the same.

It is a terrible blow to every man who served under him.

MAJ.-GEN. ERLAND F. FISH, commanding officer 26th Division, National Guard—No man had more friends than Gen. Edwards. His passing will be a real loss, not only to Massachusetts and New England but to the entire country.

RICHARD F. PAUL, state commander American Legion—A terrible blow. The Legion has lost its best friend, and we will have to go a long way to replace "Daddy" Edwards. My personal sorrow prohibits any further statement at this time.

JESSE F. STEVENS, former Adjutant-General—It is a great loss. All the old 26th Division will miss him terribly.

FORMER MAYOR JOHN F. FITZGERALD—The death of Gen. Edwards is a great loss to the community, as he was easily the most popular man in this section of the country. He was an outstanding figure, a man of strong convictions who did not hesitate to voice his opinion on important questions, a man beloved by all. I never knew such devotion as the men who served under him in the World War displayed This love of their great leader was shown on every possible occasion.

LIEUT.-GOV. WILLIAM S. YOUNGMAN—The death of Gen. Edwards is certainly a shock to me, although I feared he could not recover from his illness. There will be many a tear shed today by World War veterans who served under him and Spanish War veterans who served with him.

MAYOR RICHARD M. RUSSELL Cambridge, a World War veteran—Thirty thousand veterans of the YD are mourning the loss of their gallant leader. Thousands of personal friends and admirers join them. Great fighting soldier that he was, I think Gen. Edwards' most remarkable characteristic was his ability to win and hold the respect, and above all, the love of his men.

DEPARTMENT COMMANDER JULIAN D. LUCAS, Veterans of Foreign Wars of the U. S.—The death of Gen. Edwards has touched the hearts of thousands of ex-service men in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. His brilliant record of service to his country was one shining example of the patriotism and devotion to duty. We feel that in the death of Gen. Edwards the veteran has lost one of his best friends. Such interest in the veteran, even after his termination from service, has always been sincere. The Department of Massachusetts, Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States, mourns his loss and shall always remember him as the Daddy to all veterans.

GEN. ALFRED F. FOOTE, State Commissioner of Public Safety, who served under Gen. Edwards as field officer of the 104th Inf.— We have suffered an irreparable loss and I, personally, as must every one who was privileged to know him, keenly feel and mourn his passing. His death brings a grief, deep and sincere, into thousands of households, where a memory of him will long linger in reverent respect, love and admiration.

REAR ADMIRAL LOUIS M. NULTON, commandant of the Charlestown Navy Yard—Gen. Edwards was a fine soldier and a fine man. "He was greatly beloved by his men and by the community he loved and served so faithfully. He will be greatly missed in many walks of life. He was such a familiar and beloved figure.

MAJ.-GEN. SAMUEL S. SUMNER, U. S. A., of Brookline—I have known Gen. Edwards for a long time. I knew him at West Point. When he was in command of the First Corps Area, I went over regularly to South Boston to confer with him on many matters bearing upon modern methods in warfare.

He was well-served in his profession. He knew how to handle men. He showed excellent judgment in that particular. No one in the Army ever got close to

Gen. Edwards Had Valiant Career as Soldier

By BERT FORD

Taps have sounded for the "Daddy of the Fighting Twenty-Sixth."

Maj.-Gen. Clarence R. Edwards, war-time commander of the Yankee Division, who died early today at Phillips House, Massachusetts General Hospital, since Jan. 14 had fought the grimmest battle in his long and brilliant career.

Gen. Edwards celebrated his 71st birthday on New Year's Day at his country estate "Doneroving" in Westwood when he entertained 300 guests, many of them officers who served with him in France.

His death cast gloom throughout New England. As "Skipper" of the Yankee Division, he was beloved by every man who served under him and by their mothers, fathers, wives, sweethearts, sisters, brothers and cousins. No other military figure in the annals of New England ever held the enviable position that "Daddy" Edwards enjoyed in the hearts of the general public.

He seemed mayor, governor and general all rolled into one bighearted father. The caste element, said to be traditional at West Point, had never hardened Gen. Edwards. His was the attitude of the French military leaders toward the Poilu.

Six feet two, lean and erect he looked every inch a soldier. He was a straight-shooter. He lived and died a humanitarian.

Loved New England
Born in Cleveland but His Heart Was Here

His supreme joy was that fate permitted him to "come home" to New England. Born in Cleveland, O., he was a New Englander at heart, his forbears having settled in Longmeadow, near Springfield.

What more fitting then than that he should lead the Yankee volunteers, the militia units of New England, across the seas to take part in the greatest conflict of all time. And under the leadership of General Edwards the "Twenty-Sixth Division" carved a record for length and gallantry of service on the western front second to none in the American Expeditionary Forces.

"Daddy" Edwards faced the "Final Muster" proud of that record and of his men. "Stout-hearted lads," was how he referred to them in extolling them on the public platforms.

We recall a conversation in his headquarters in Boucq in the Toul sector just after the Yankee Division had taken up an entire divisional front, the first in the A. E. F. to assume that responsibility. It was Easter Day in 1918. The doughboys from home had just wallowed through the mud from Chemin - des - Dames where they had been receiving their baptism of fire brigaded with the French. It had been raining for days.

"I'm bothered about my men's shoes!" said Gen. Edwards crossing the stone floor of the chateau. "I inspected some of them today and their soles were worn clear through. My first job here is to get — new issue of shoes if I have to steal them. Sound shoes mean good health and efficiency and I owe it to their mothers."

Idol of His Men
Often Stopped Them on Streets for a Chat

This little incident illustrates the keen and unwavering interest he had in his men even when his military responsibilities were the heaviest.

One day in Boston a buck private saluted Gen. Edwards on the street and passed on. The soldier wore two gold service stripes and a wound stripe.

"Halt Pvt. Fitzgerald," shouted the general. "What do you mean by passing me like that without stopping to talk with me? My lad, don't ever pass your commanding officer without shaking hands."

At a joint reception given to Gen. Edwards by the city and state at the State House after his return from France, a little woman timidly approached him and said:

"I am the mother of a boy that lies among the dead at Chateau Thierry. He never wrote to me that he didn't say he'd go to hell with you general."

"Daddy," Edwards hugged her on the spot.

When Sergt. "Eddie" Creed, of South Boston, son of the late Judge Creed of Municipal Court returned to the front lines after a six-weeks' liberty bond campaign in New England, he brought to General Edwards a book written by his only daughter, Essie.

Creed returned to the division in August, 1918. When he handed General Edwards the book, the general said sadly:

"You know the story, don't you, sergeant?"

"No sir," replied Sergt Creed." "My daughter died from the flu while you were on the way over here with her book."

Ovation by Legion
Only Regret Was Mrs. Edwards Was Not Alive

Eddie said the skipper's lips trembled when he told him about Bessie who was a Red Cross nurse at a southern camp when stricken. We met General Edwards back of the scenes at the American Legion convention in the Arena last fall. In snappy uniform and with a perfect mount he was one of the outstanding features of the parade the day before. We mentioned what a flattering ovation he got and he said in broken voice:

"Yes, it was splendid, but do you know, since Mrs. Edwards passed on, nothing seems quite the same."

Great as was Gen. Edwards' popularity hereabouts after his return from France and his subsequent retirement to private life, it did not eclipse his prominence before the World War, a phase of his life apparently little known to his legion of admirers in New England.

He had been a national figure before he came from Panama to Boston to take command of the Northeast Department and later to command the Yankee Division which sailed for France in September, 1917. He had been friend and confidante of President Taft, a fellow Ohioan, President Roosevelt, Elihu Root, Myron T. Herrick, Senator Lodge, John Hays Hammond, Lars Anderson and many others of distinction.

Had Long Career
After Leaving West Point Saw Much Service

He was born in Cleveland, Jan. 1, 1860, a descendant of the Jonathan Edwards family of western Massachusetts. He was graduated from West Point in 1883 and was promoted through grades to brigadier-general, which rank he attained in 1906. He received temporary promotion to major-general in 1917, was demoted to his regular rank after the World War and given permanent rank as major-general in 1921.

In 1889 General Edwards married Bessie R. Porter, of Niagara Falls. She died January 25, 1929, at their home in Westwood. When a second lieutenant he commanded a detail that guarded President Garfield's grave in Cleveland, after the assassination by Guiteau.

He accompanied General Lawton on the transport Grant which was the first to go through the Suez Canal to the Philippines, where he was given command of the First Division, Eighth Army Corps. He was made adjutant-general and organized that office. He participated in all the campaigns of General Lawton until the latter was killed in December, 1899, and was detailed by the War Department to record General Lawton's body in Washington.

While in the Philippines he was promoted to lieutenant-colonel, 47th Volunteer infantry, but did not join the regiment as General Lawton made him a member of his staff. After the Lawton funeral General Edwards was detailed to take charge of the Division of Customs and Insular Affairs, was advanced to colonel and then to brigadier-general and placed in charge of the bureau in 1906.

This gave him charge of civil affairs in the Philippines, Cuba, Porto Rico, San Domingo, and, in addition he was made chief of the executive bureau of the Panama Canal. He organized the Panama Canal commission office in Washington.

While in this capacity he accompanied Secretary of War Taft to the Philippines and had charge of a large party of Senators and Congressmen who made an official visit to the Philippine Islands, Japan and China, in 1905.

Many Missions
Went Twice With Taft to the Philippines

In 1907, he again accompanied Secretary of War Taft to the Philippines when Taft inaugurated the Philippine Assembly. He accompanied Secretary Taft on the U. S. Rainbow from Manila to Vladivostok, where Secretary Taft became the guest of the Czar on his special train and visited Moscow and St. Petersburg.

In 1911 Gen. Edwards was made a member of the mission, of which John Hays Hammond was chairman, to visit the European powers to participate in the Panama-Pacific exposition at San Francisco. He returned in June, 1912. In October of that year he was transferred back to the line at his own request.

Officers and men of the Yankee Division and the folks back home were incensed when they learned of General Edwards' transfer from command and his recall to the States. The transfer came following the division's brilliant capture of the heights of the Meuse, for which it won a citation from the corps commander.

The late United States Senator John W. Weeks of Massachusetts took an active part in the protest that followed. He wrote a stinging letter to the man whom he succeeded as Secretary of War. General Edwards was returned to his command of the Northeast Department in Boston.

When Gen. Edwards went overseas as commander of the New England troops he carried with him powerful credentials which his wartimes aide, Col. John W. Hyatt, said he never used. He bore letters of introduction to royalty, ambassadors and persons high in social and political circles abroad. His contacts, socially and politically in Washington, were a matter of common knowledge in regular army circles and caused certain persons at G. H. Q. to fear and envy him, according to well-founded gossip at the time.

He was awarded the Croix de Guerre, with palm, by the French government and made a commander of the Legion of Honor and received the Grand Cross of the Order of Leopold of Belgium. He held honorary degrees from Fordham University, University of Maine, Middlebury, Trinity and Boston Colleges.

Shunned Politics
Ignored Many Urgings to Run for Offices

He might have won high office if he had cared to heed the urgings of friends to enter the political arena. In the recent campaign admirers tried to induce him to be a wet candidate for he U. S. Senate, but he declined.

General Edwards was an active opponent of prohibition: "Temperance by regulation and not by prohibition," was his slogan. He appeared before the Wickersham committee in Washington, and replied to the charge made by former Attorney General J. Weston Allen, of Massachusetts, that the bravery and efficiency of British troops had been impaired on the western front by use of liquor.

"I served with the British," re-

O'Neill's Latest Play to Run Three Nights

New York, Feb. 14—Eugene O'Neill's latest, a play to run three nights, has required the engagement of a staff of typists to copy his manuscript so that it may be in the hands of the Theater Guild within a month, the Guild has announced.

The play has not been named yet. The Guild was reticent about its nature. O'Neill himself is in Tours, France.

The three-night O'Neill play was described as so written that the three sections will compose three distinct plays and will add up into a co-ordinated whole.

plied General Edwards. "I went over the top with them four times. Such a statement is outrageous and untrue, and I condemn it. We always paid tribute to the courage of the English, Scotch and Irish troops.

"I never saw any intemperance in France, although wine and beer were freely drunk by the troops. God knows, when I saw my men shivering in that clay soup out there at dawn, I would like to have given them something to buck them up. They went over the top on cold water and came back that way.

In battle emergency he was calm and efficient and a fighter under fire.

The unforgettable hardships, achievements and glories of the 26th Division shall forever be the personal achievements and glories of Gen. Edwards.

General, we salute you.

In Westwood, where Gen. Edwards lived on his estate "Doneroving," the grief was particularly keen. Neighbors of the general were informed of the death of their friend by the tolling of church bells in Westwood and Dedham.

As the news became more general, flags on private homes appeared, drooping at half-staff.

"Daddy" Edwards is gone."

Engineers, was selected. Still further improvement was noted.

A decision on whether was causing the general's illness could be safely probed was reached and yesterday the general submitted again to the knife.

While his condition had improved, it was generally agreed that the operation was a life and death struggle.

The general was on the operating table more than an hour, and after it, Surgeon Richard H. Miller ordered an emergency transfusion. Irving Peatfield of the Back Bay, a member of the Headquarters company under Edwards, submitted to the transfer of blood. Immediately after the operation the general slipped into a coma, remaining unconscious for more than 12 hours.

Rallying late last night, the general smiled at those who spoke to him and seemed to be on the upgrade.

TURN FOR WORSE

Shortly after 4 o'clock this morning a sudden turn for the worse was noted and Dr. Richard H. Miller was summoned by Dr. Horatio Rogers, house physician, who had remained at the bedside all night.

Mrs. Otis, his sister, was hurriedly summoned when it was apparent that he end was near.

Col. John W. Hyatt, the general's wartime aide, was notified and came from the private room in the hospital which he has been occupying since the illness of his commander.

Three of the five nurses who attended Edwards were in the room when Drs. Miller and Rogers said it would be a matter of the general lived through the day.

BREATHES HIS LAST

Gen. Edwards rallied from the second coma, looked around the bedside and evidently realized that the end was near.

The fighting spirit which had carried him through many campaigns forced a last smile to his lips.

Then he breathed His last.

Police Get 'Dead or Alive' Roundup Order

It's St. Valentine's Day! Did You Forget Her?

THE MODERN LOVER sends his sweetheart violets, all encased in a beautiful heart shaped box. Of course there are ribbons and bows to decorate the box. In yesteryear, gallants bold sent hearts made of paper lace. And let us remind you that the old fashioned type of Valentine is still seen in the market place today. So the old fashioned goes out with the newer types with their messages of love. It's Mildred Kiabe, of Roslindale, that you see with the heart box of flowers. You recall the old type—yet new—shown below. (Staff photos.)

BANDIT DRIVE STARTED BY HULTMAN

Flying Squadron Is Doubled in Week-End Drive; to Be Armed With Sawed-Off Shotguns

"Get them dead or alive," is the order to Boston policemen in a war on week-end holdup men.

A campaign to rid Boston of gunmen who have operated principally during week-ends was begun today by the Boston police department. Every possible effort to stamp out week-end hold-ups of small stores will be made.

The flying squadron of 35 men has been more than doubled by the addition of 40 men. Inspectors on night duty have been increased to 20, doubling the former number.

The augmented flying squadron worked in two shifts last night for the first time, touring every portion of the city constantly in automobiles.

The meeting places of known gangsters and other night prowlers were visited several times in an effort to keep tabs on their activities. Each auto carried four men in command of a sergeant.

All were armed with sawed-off shotguns and each carried a powerful searchlight. Deputy Supt. McDevitt required each sergeant to report at regular intervals to him at police headquarters.

WOMAN SOUGHT AS VICE RING IS EXPOSED

Foley Expects More Arrests Soon as Result of Story Told by Three Girls

(Girl's own story of Boston vice conditions, as related to Miss Kathryn M. Queeley, probation officer, will be found on Page 5 of today's Boston American.)

The arrest of a second man in connection with the startling vice confessions made by three young Dorchester girls, was revealed today by the police.

Morris Levine of Batavia st., Back Bay, will be in Roxbury court Thursday charged with a statutory offense and enticing one of the girls to lead an immoral life. Levine was arrested by Special Officer Douglass of Back Bay station.

Additional warrants for several other persons will be sought in Dorchester, Roxbury and Brighton courts in connection with the stories told by the girls.

A roundup of all persons alleged to have been implicated in the vice ring will be made according to Dist. Atty. William J. Foley and leading police officials.

ASK FOR WARRANTS.

Said Dist. Atty. William J. Foley: "We have already instructed the police to apply for warrants in the Brighton and Roxbury courts for prosecution of two persons who are alleged to have been connected in different ways as a result of the stories told by these three young girls.

"One of the alleged offenders is a woman in the Brighton district and the other is a man connected with a Huntington ave., Back Bay, restaurant, who will be prosecuted in Roxbury court."

Police officials said Wednesday Sergt. John Gale of Fields Corner, Dorchester, police station will apply for warrants in Dorchester District Court for a State st. lawyer and an Atlantic ave. business man on statutory charges.

The woman in question operates a fashionable millinery shop.

The lawyer is said to have disappeared from his usual haunts, but the police are known to be hot on his trail.

ORGANIZED VICE RING

That an organized vice ring existed is the belief of the authorities as a result of their investigations of the stories told by the three girls, eldest of whom is 17 years. The worst case of commercialized vice in Boston revealed in many years was unearthed by the girl's confessions.

Dist. Atty. William F. Foley and Asst. Dist. Atty. Daniel J. Glinn are in charge of the investigation, and say they are determined to smash the vice ring. They were amazed at the stories told by the three young girls under oath.

POLICE TO PAY SCHWARTZ NOW

Asst. Corp. Counsel Leo Schwartz, legal adviser to Police Commissioner Eugene C. Hultman since last May, submitted his resignation today to Corporation Counsel Samuel Silverman. It was accepted.

Silverman then received a letter from Commissioner Hultman in which the police head said Schwartz is becoming his legal adviser at a salary of $5000, the same as he obtained before.

In a statement which he made Silverman intimated there has been friction between Schwartz and himself over advice that Schwartz gave to Hultman.

Silverman said, "If I am going to be held responsible for legal advice given the police commissioner I want to know what is going on. I don't want to be held responsible for advice I do not give. It would do best for Mr. Hultman to have his own counsel."

At the same time Silverman made public a letter he wrote to Commissioner Hultman a few days ago in which he said "Since May 26, 1930, it has become quite apparent that you require an assistant to devote a great part of his time to your legal work and I finding it impossible to give you an assistant for that purpose.

"In addition I have some doubts as to my legal right to advise you as police commissioner under existing law, for it seems to me the legislative intent was that you as police commissioner should employ such legal assistance as you deem necessary in the performance of your duties and incur the necessary expense to the amount limited by the statute."

To Silverman's statement on Schwartz's resignation, the latter remained silent. Commr. Hultman also refused to comment beyond his formal announcement of Schwartz' employment.

CRISIS IN SPAIN; CABINET QUITS

Madrid, Feb. 14 (AP)—The government of Premier General Damaso Berenguer, successor to the Primo De Rivera dictatorship, fell today, bringing to a head a crisis which appeared to be the most dangerous of any faced by King Alfonso in the course of his long reign.

The King, accepting the resignation of Gen. Berenguer and his cabinet, cancelled parliamentary elections which were scheduled for March 1 and 15 and immediately began conferences with political leaders with a view to formation of a new cabinet.

While the cabinet had been under fire for several weeks, indeed from its very inception in January, 1930, the situation which brought its fall developed only late last night when the Count De Romanones and other important Liberal monarchist leaders withdrew their support to the cabinet's election program.

POCKET VETO OF BONUS FEARED

Washington, Feb. 14 (INS)—A demand that Congress pass upon legislation to cash the soldiers' bonus certificates before February 23, in order to prevent President Hoover from killing the measure by a "pocket veto" after adjournment, was made in the Senate this afternoon by Senator Couzens (R.) of Michigan.

He said it was the plan of the administration leaders to pass all appropriations bills, before calling up the bonus legislation. This meant, he said, the bill, if passed, would go to the President just before adjournment and Mr. Hoover could kill it by a "pocket veto."

"That's a rather contemptible procedure," said Couzens, "because it is plain we can pass some sort of legislation. We ought to get it to him next week, so he can veto it if he desires and we will have a chance to pass upon the veto. We ought to deal with this legislation fairly and honestly."

It was reported the White House had expressed a willingness to boost the loan from 22½ to 40 per cent, but objected to the figure set by the committee.

The attack of Secretary Mellon was followed by the dropping of hints at the treasury that in event of enactment of the measure, the treasury might recommend either increased taxes or a bond issue.

SENATE PASSES RELIEF LOAN

Washington, Feb. 14 (AP)—The Senate today accepted the $20,000,000 drouth loan compromise on relief legislation by vote of 47 to 37.

Supported by both Democratic and Republican leaders, the substitute for the $25,000,000 Red Cross relief fund was given approval after six days of debate in which Republican Independents and some Democrats severely condemned it.

It must now be approved by the House, where administration leaders already have promised it support.

President Hoover's approval is conceded. The compromise appropriates $20,000,000 as a loan fund for "agricultural rehabilitation."

The compromise was embodied in the appropriation bill carrying funds for next year's operations of the interior department. The entire bill was formally approved by the vote. This completes Senate action on the interior bill, the first of 11 supply measures to get through the Senate.

Eight Republicans, six Democrats and the Farmer-Labor senator voted against the compromise. Thirty-one Democrats and 36 Republicans voted for it.

Working Girl Not Cause of Slump

Turning Jobs Over to Men Dangerous, Says Miss Marion McClench

By NANCY BREWSTER

The sudden or gradual retirement of women from business would not help the unemployment situation.

Rather would it aggravate it, Miss Marion McClench, president of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, declared in an interview.

Analyzing the unemployment problem from the woman's standpoint, Miss McClench said that should the 10,000,000 women as revealed in a recent census as gainfully employed suddenly stop working and the money earned by them withdrawn from business, a serious situation would result.

"We often hear the remark that women who work are one cause of the present condition. That is not so. A very conservative estimate of the individual earning capacity of these women is about $1600 a year, making a stupendous total earned by women each year of $10,000,000,000. If all of these women should suddenly stop working and this amount of money were withdrawn from business, a crisis would certainly be created."

War Memoirs of Field Marshal Foch

GEN. MANGIN HALTS ENEMY AND REGAINS MUCH GROUND

In yesterday's instalment Marshal Foch told of the desperate fighting on the Western Front during late May and early June, 1918, when the Germans were concentrating their offensive in a drive toward Paris and Foch was marshaling all the forces at his command to halt them.

Today he tells of his misunderstandings with Marshal Haig, and of the maneuvers he directed to meet the crucial situation.

By MARSHAL FERDINAND FOCH,

Commander-in-Chief of the Allied Armies During the Closing Phases of the World War.

Translated from the French by Col. T. Bentley Mott.

The battle for which the Germans were getting ready, west of the Oise, was in reality part of a plan of operations, the execution of which had been begun on May 27, 1918. At the start, this aimed at a combined action along the whole front between Rheims and Montdidier.

Lack of heavy artillery and trench mortars had prevented the Germans from carrying out this operation all at once and they had been obliged to resign themselves to two successive operations: one, east of the Oise, effected May 27 on the Chemin des Dames, the other to be pronounced west of that river. The latter could not be launched until the artillery was available.

But in the second operation, the Germans were no longer benefitted by the same advantages as in the first. The necessity of making haste forced them to neglect the minute precautions for the attack on May 27.

Consequently their new intentions were quickly discovered by the French aviation and intelligence service. By May 30, Gen. Petain knew the lines of the enemy's plan; one point alone remained obscure, the size of the forces that he would employ.

In theory this might be very considerable, for according to the calculations of the French staff, the German Supreme Command had some 60 divisions in reserve, as he could launch an offensive between the Oise and the Somme composed of 45 divisions, a stronger force, consequently, than he used on May 27 against the Chemin des Dames, and in any case one greatly exceeding the total of all we had available.

Allies in Parley

Misunderstanding Leads to Paris Council of War

In reality, the German Eighteenth Army (General von Hutier) to which this operation was entrusted, placed only 13 divisions in the first line, on a front of 21 miles. This army had in front of it, in the first line, the seven divisions of the Third French Army (General Humbert), supported by five divisions in the second line, or in reserve.

As can be realized, these forces were insufficient, certainly at the outset, to check the German attack. But, in view of the uncertainty prevailing during the days preceding the attack, as to its possible development, we were obliged to provide largely for the future.

Accordingly, on June 4, I warned Marshal Haig that if "the enemy pursued his maneuver without pause in the direction of Paris between the Marne and the Oise, or if he developed it on a wider front—between Chateau-Thierry and Montdidier, for example—all the allied forces in France would have to give their aid to a battle which, in all probability, would decide the fate of the war."

To provide for thi seventuality, I requested him to make detailed preparations for moving toward the front all his available troops, general and local reserves, and also to consider an eventual reduction of his forces in the front line.

This request caused a misunderstanding with British General Headquarters.

Field Marshal Haig, who, in accordance with previous instructions, had ordered three of his divisions (XXII Corps) toward the Somme, west of Amiens, and who, at the same time, was still apprehensive of an attack between the Lys and the Somme (1) formally protested taking away from his command any part whatsoever of the British Army, so long as the threat of any enemy attack hung over him and he consulted to his Government in conformity with the Beauvais agreement.

A meeting was held in Paris on June 7 in the Prime Minister's office, at which were present Monsieur Clemenceau, Lord Milner, Field Marshal Haig, Generals Wilson, Lawrence, Weygand and myself.

Lord Milner stated that the British Government, as much disturbed as Marshal Haig had been by the call made on the British reserves, had requested the convening of this conference. Nothing was more easy for me than to point out that I had in no way touched the British reserves.

All I had done so far was to request the Field Marshal to consider eventualities and make preparations for them, and that, moreover, I had not the slightest intention of depriving him of his reserves until the necessity for doing so should be felt.

I repeated what I had said once before, that it was my intention to insure, at one and the same time, the liason between the British and French armies, the defense of Paris and the protection of the ports, since each was essential to the success of the war.

Indeed, leeving out of consideration the uneasiness of the people, and consequently of their Governments, it was a fact that the enemy was very near to the attainment of one of his main objectives, Paris or the Channel ports.

Clemenceau and Lloyd George, at the head of their respective governments, dispensed a fine ardor in support of the struggle; President Wilson, a long time coming into the war, now asked nothing better than to devote to it the immense resources of his country.

Meanwhile, in anticipation of the impending attack between Montdidier and Noyon, on June 5 I placed a division from the Army Detachment of the North (the 14th) at Gen. Petain's disposal.

I took every precaution to avoid being at the mercy of any partial attacks which the enemy might attempt as diversions in these regions, by moving into Lorraine and the Vosges the French divisions which were to be reconstituted and the American divisions which had come from the British army.

Foe Pierces Lines

French Hurled Back Over Wide Front at Oury

On June 9, after a bombardment beginning at midnight, and to which our counter batteries immediately replied, Gen. von Hutier's infantry, at 3:45 a. m., arrived upon our lines between Ayencourt and Thiescourt. At 6 a. m. the enemy's attack extended up to the Oise.

The German divisions were not uniformly distributed over the front of attack. Spread out on the wings, they were heavily massed in the center, between Rollot and Thiescourt, where from nine to thirteen divisions conducted the attack.

It was here that the rupture occurred. The 53th and 125th French Divisions gave way under the shock, and shortly after 7 a. m. they were driven back beyond Cuvry. At 10 a. m. the enemy entered Ressons-sur-Matz and at 11 a. m. he was master of our second position on a front of seven and one-half miles, from Mory to Marcuil Lamothe. His rapid advance along the valley of the Matz thus enabled him to turn the defenses established between Ribecourt and Lassigny; the Sainte Claude plateau and the Thiescourt wood fell into his hands.

The intervention of six French divisions, which had been held in reserve, fortunately slowed up his advance in the course of the afternoon and, by the end of the day, he was stopped along the line Mery-Belloy-Marqueglise-Vandelicourt.

In short, Gen. von Hutier's attack, apart from the right wing, which gained little ground, had made a fresh and important bulge in the French line. Compeigne was directly threatened.

In my opinion, however, the forces of the Reserve Group of Armies were still adequate to deal with the situation. Moreover, the fact that the Crown Prince of Bavaria's forces did not seem to have taken part in the fighting on June 9 determined me to leave untouched all of Haig's forces.

Gen. Mangin Pushes Enemy Back, Retakes Towns

As a matter of precaution, however I requested him to move the southern division of the XXII Corps, on the morning of the 10th to the neighborhood of Conty, and to replace it south of the Somme by another division. This was to enable Gen. Petain to bring down the whole of the French reserves which were then in rear of his First Army.

On the 10th the enemy's attack was continued, but without his obtaining anything like the same success as on the previous day.

The effect of this movement, however, was to force our troops on the left bank (XXXVIII Corps) to withdraw to the old 1914 positions at Bailly, Tracy-le-Val and Puisaleine.

In spite of this unfortunate occurence, the results of the 10th, taken as a whole, remained satisfactory.

The French defense, organized in depth in accordance with the latest instructions, had deadened the dash of the start, that is to say the sudden and violent onrush of an attack prepared by powerful artillery.

Better still, General Fayolle was about to take advantage of this situation to deliver a counter-attack on the enemy's flank, using five fresh divisions, four being in the first line.

General Mangin, who at that time was without a command, had been given the task of organizing and directing this attack. He took it in hand at once, and, on the afternoon of the 11th, I found him at Noailles, in the midst of a conference with General Fayolle, who commanded this group of armies. He explained to us the result of his reconnaissances, his intentions and the dispositions he had already made, with the most perfect clarity.

Although the greater part of his troops, particularly the artillery, could not arrive before night, he undertook to carry out a properly concerted attack the following morning.

To this end, before the day finished, he assembled on the ground the commander of divisions of artillery and of the principal units, and allotted them their objectives and their lines of departure. As the troops arrived, during the night, they were to take up their designated positions.

In the evening and during the night, Gen. Mangin issued his orders to the division commanders, fixing the hours for the artillery preparation and for the execution of the attack.

The insistence of Gen. Mangin and the clearness of his views convinced Gen. Fayolle and he drew up his orders dated 4 p. m. the 11th for the attack to be carried out as soon as possible on the 11th. These orders, which were communicated to the troops, concluded with these words:

"Tomorrow's operation should be the end of the defensive battle which we have been fighting for more than two months. It should mark the definite check of the offensive on our part. It must succeed. Let everyone understand this."

The attack did, in fact, begin the following dayy, the 11th, at 11 a. m. The effect was astonishing. The villages of Mery and Belloy were taken, the valley of the Aronde was cleared and more than 1000 prisoners with several guns were captured.

On the 12th I met Gen. Petain at Chevincourt and congratulated him for Gen. Mangin's operation to be pushed only to the point where it would produce a definite effect, so as to avoid losses that brought no corresponding profit.

It was our intention to hold and bar our available divisions as much as possible. They might be useful elsewhere; for example, on the Somme where the enemy threat remained undiminished.

Consequently, no more serious attacks were carried out.

On June 13th quiet once more reigned on the villages of Mery and Belloy were taken, the valley of the Aronde was cleared and more than 1000 prisoners with several guns were captured.

Girl's Story of Petting Involves Many Men

This is the confession made by one of three Dorchester school girls to Miss Kathryn M. Queely, probation officer, and other officials, and corroborated by the other girls:

"One day in October I met my girl chum and we decided to go down to an Albany st. dress shop where we knew we could get dresses cheap. We had been there several times before and could always get bargains in what they called seconds.

"We were looking over some dresses when Mr. Hoffenberg came in and inquired about dresses. He spoke to us in an off-hand manner and in a few minutes we were all talking.

"Hoffenberg sort of began kidding us, telling us we were pretty girls and 'pretty nice.' When we two girls started to go, Mr. Hoffenberg said:

"'Wait a couple of minutes, girls, and I will take you home in my car. I'm going out toward Mattapan and you might just as well ride with me.'

"We accepted his invitation and he took us straight home, but on the way he asked if we would see him the next night. I said, 'Why, we have to go to school tomorrow night,' and he said, 'Well, that's all right. School will be out by 2:30 and I can meet you after that and we can go for a ride."

"I asked my chum if it was all right with her and she said, 'sure, that's great.' So I said to Mr. Hoffenberg, 'You're not kidding us, are you?'

"'Don't worry, girls, I will be waiting for you,' he said. 'What school do you go to?' I told him the Dorchester Evening high school, and he said, 'O. K., girls, I will be there and will have my friend with me.'

"I called for my chum the next night and on the way to school we talked about whether we would keep the date. We finally decided to meet them.

"When we came out of school, Hoffenberg was waiting in his automobile with another man, who was introduced to us. My chum got in the back seat with that man and I sat in front.

"He drove over to his sign shop in Dorchester and the four of us went inside. Pretty soon, Hoffenberg put his arm around me and began kissing me.

"On the way home we made another date for a few days later. The meeting place was the same. This time Hoffenberg had a different man with him, a lawyer who has an office down on State st. We took my chum home and then I went over to the sign shop with them.

"The next time I met Hoffenberg and the first man, my sister was with me. This time we went down to the other man's office, in Atlantic ave.

"Hoffenberg said, 'You two girls are too pretty to be working for a living, and your chum is too pretty, too.' He talked about 'easy money.'

"A few days later I heard Hoffenberg had met my sister and chum and taken them to a Commonwealth ave. house where there was a woman living. Some men called there. All of us three were there at different times.

"We were also taken to a house on Massachusetts ave., near the Girls' Latin School annex, where we used to watch the girls coming out of school afternoons. I don't remember how many times we were there.

"Hoffenberg drove my chum and me to a house on Columbia rd., near Seaver st., where he left us, and the next time I saw him he took us over to a Chinese restaurant and introduced us to a man who took us to another man's office in the Back Bay."

HOFFENBERG CONVICTED.

Hoffenberg was found guilty of statutory charges and will be sentenced Tuesday, being held meanwhile under $4000 bonds. He is unmarried and a sign painter by trade with a shop on Dorchester ave.

According to the girls one is years old the second 16 and the other 17, they were introduced to men at various apartments and offices on Commonwealth ave., Massachusetts ave., Gainsborough st., Back Bay; Columbia rd., near Seaver st., Dorchester, and Atlantic ave., and also at a Chinese restaurant.

The girls, whose names are being withheld because of their ages, were students at the evening classes at Dorchester High School until they met Hoffenberg, and through him became acquainted with the woman, who is a resident of Brighton, a male teacher and others.

Two of the girls are sisters whose mother died four years ago, while the other is their chum.

him without feeling he had him for a friend at all times.

I have always been a close friend of him and admired his ability. I was with him in the Philippines. His ability marked every venture of his in the Army. You could not help admiring Edwards for the splendid way he showed his interest in every one under his command. I shall miss him.

GEN. EDWARD L. LOGAN, who served with Gen. Edwards in France: In the death of Gen. Edwards, America has lost one of its first citizens, and those who were privileged to serve under him, both in his civil and military capacities have lost a real friend. His life, in all its aspects, was devoted to the service of his country and the advancement of its citizens. He was always kind, gracious, loyal, but firm and resolute withal in the performance of every duty. His career in the army was a distinguished one. His work in the Insular Affairs Department was a great contribution to the institutions of America and to its dependent Philippines. In two wars, his service, in responsible service, was of the highest character. Following his retirement, with the tireless aid of his devoted wife, he continued with unabated zeal and devotion in his constant solicitude for those with whom he had served, both intimately and collectively.

For his service, both in peace and in war, he earned and richly deserved the gratitude of his fellow citizens. To those who were privileged to serve under him, his memory will be one blest with the recollection of a sympathetic understanding, a most loyal friendship, and an inspiring leadership. I deeply mourn the loss of a great citizen, a noble leader, a true friend.

JUDGE JOSEPH R. McCOOLE of Superior Court: The death of Gen. Edwards is a big loss to the boys of the YD Club and those of the 101st and also the country at large. I had the pleasure of serving with Gen. Edwards as a trustee of the Lotta Crabtree estate and always found him genial and kindly and much interested in his work, which was mostly for the benefit of World War veterans. His door was always open to them and when they called at his office he was glad to see them.

CONGRESSMAN JOHN J. DOUGLASS, who has just returned to his home in East Boston after several months in a hospital: "With supreme sorrow I learned of the death of Gen. Edwards. Taps have sounded for a great citizen, a loyal and successful soldier, a father as well as leader of his men in time of war, their friend and helper in days of peace. In his death the veterans of the World War have lost their dearest and most loving friend.

BOSTON AN OASIS OF DRAMA

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

THERE IS REASON to believe, in spite of glum reports to the contrary, that Boston at the moment is the nation's brightest spot in the thing called drama. The Shuberts, master minds of the biggest individual group in the business of making entertainment, admit it—at least by inference, if not openly. These enterprising gilders of the arts have more theaters to worry about than is good for any man's peace of mind in overcast days. Yet they manage to keep them open, with lights ablaze outside and dulcet tunes tinkling within.

GIVING MODEST measure to the Shubertian standards of what constitutes an alert drama season, matters are moving along in good order, with the situation well in hand. Of the Shubert playhouses in this old town, with the exception of the Boston Opera House, all of them will be doing business at the old stand on Monday when it comes time to summon in the faithful and lift the curtains. Not only is this an excellent showing, but by comparison with Philadelphia and Chicago a royal achievement. From the Shuberts' own mouthpiece, The New York Review, you were reminded in its latest issue that while Boston was ambling cheerfully along with five of its precious temples in full operation, only three were calling out to the multitude in each of the before mentioned centers.

OF COURSE, even here that pesky cinema had to rush to the rescue, prop up the situation and give broader aspect to the week's encouragement. For that ancient masterpiece of filmdom, D. W. Griffith's "Way Down East," is to return to life at the Majestic on Monday, polished up with new sound synchronization, including incidental music and stage effects. It will be found to be the old film ornamented in the modern manner. Curiously enough, too, before the week is out, another silent film, Charles Chaplin's new "City Lights," will cry its wares from the screen at the Tremont. Here, also, you will discover sound amplifications, but no dialogue.

THERE IS NATURALLY some speculation on the final result of this concentrated raid by silent films. No two better adversaries could be drawn into an arena to help settle the question of superiority between sound and silence. Chaplin's "City Lights" is fresh from the studio, fully invested with all the latest and most fashionable Hollywood trimmings; Griffith's "Way Down East," while venerable in length of service, is no shabby production. Mr. Griffith looked after that detail with considerable flourish, and no picture before or since, has matched it in prolonged popular appeal.

THE WARNER BROTHERS are reported to have closed their department for the production of legitimate attractions, and that with the presentation of "Heat Wave," now about ready for the stage, it will stick to pictures and leave the spoken drama to its own resources.

SYMPHONY IN MODERNIST PROGRAM

By MOSES SMITH

This week's program of the Boston Symphony Orchestra begins with a suite for piano and string orchestra by one Pilati, an Italian composer new to Boston. As heard yesterday for the first time here, this Suite is an interesting, stimulating, often charming example of the art of putting new wine into old bottles. Occasionally the bottles are—shall we say?—stretched, as in the third movement Minuet. But the results are suggestive, if not always brilliant.

Then comes the piece d'occasion, Honegger's new Symphony, dedicated to the orchestra and its conductor on the occasion of the 50th anniversary of the organization, and given its first performance yesterday. This work is more than imposing; it is a brilliant record of Honegger's musical scholarship, of his extraordinary command of the orchestral medium. It is also, surprising, for in the three movements, though the form is free, the general outlines and principles of symphonic development, as developed by the old masters, are for the most part followed. Of course the harmonic idiom is ultra-modern. But our main objection is that, aside from the principal theme of the third movement, the musical ideas are noticeable by their absence. And the quiet ending of that movement is artificial and forced.

The second half of the program was devoted to the "Canticum Fratris Solis" and "Pagan Poem" of Charles Martin Loeffler, a fine composer living in our midst, who recently celebrated his 70th birthday anniversary. Povla Frijsh was soloist in the first.

DEVIL GOES 'POP!' JUST LIKE THE WEASEL IN THE JIG

By ALBERT HACKETT
Co-author "Up Pops the Devil," at Wilbur

It is not unusual for the author to struggle through several versions and rewritings of a new play before it ever reaches the stage and even after that time for that matter, but it is somewhat extraordinary to experience a prolonged period of titular strife and storm.

For instance, Miss Goodrich, co-author with me, had practically little or no difficulty with the script of "Up Pops the Devil," as it is being played now almost as we originally fashioned it. But the title; now there is a different story. I ventured to say that our play has had 20 titles, some lasting for an hour and others lasting for a few weeks, while no less than 400 or 500 were suggested in the course of its christening. When the manuscript was delivered to Mr. Shubert for production, we had named it "Let's Get Married." That was only a temporary name and we were always on the lookout during rehearsals for a good name.

Albert Hackett

Then one day the stage manager rushed in breathlessly with a "wow," as he termed it, "Love Follows Love."

"Imagine," he said, "getting the word 'love' into the title twice in three words."

And so for three and a half hours it was called "Love Follows Love."

Then in rapid succession it became "Day by Day," "Girls of Today," "Saith the Preacher," "Remember the Jane," "No Man," and, by way of variety, "Heigh Ho Hum."

In fact the New York premiere then was only seven days away and unless a new idea for a title was born mighty soon it would have to "stick."

In that last week prior to the big night in New York, mummers and playwrights would gather nightly and toss titles hither and yon until almost every type of a name was suggested. The inevitable comic at length suggested "Full House Tonight," and he was promptly ejected from our midst. Then suddenly, like all such things seem to happen, up popped the germ of the name now being used. Someone remarked that "he was always the devil in the cast."

"Say," remarked Miss Goodrich, "that's not a bad title; how about 'Up Jumps the Devil.' It certainly fits the play."

Everyone fell upon it, and immediately all began revising it. In turn it became "In Came the Devil" and "The Devil You Say." By this process we finally hit upon "Up Popped the Devil." Just after this name had been announced to the press as the final selection, we changed it again to "Up Pops the Devil," for the sake of euphony. And so it will make its bow at the Wilbur, Monday night. I hope you like it.

ONE WAY IS ONLY ROAD TO TAKE

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

"THE DEVIL TO PAY," at Loew's State, is a trail-blazer along comedy lane, pointing the way for a return to screen normalcy in its class. The photoplay scintillates, so sparkling is it. Its tone is as soothing as that of a babbling brook, so sterling is its direction. It has exuberant life and abundance of laughs, and moreover, it is cleverly acted. That genial gentleman of the lights and shadows, Ronald Colman, is at his best, but he is not alone in his excellence. Through a rare author-actor-director combination for good, "The Devil to Pay" becomes film fare fit for a movie-loving, and discriminating, king.

HUMOR IS AT its best in this cinema effort. The story is not the thing; it is the way that story is told. The plot, never heavy, but often fluffy, light as air, as delightful as the flight of a butterfly and as unexpected as the hop-skip-and-jump of a flea, deals with the ne'er-do-well son of an English nobleman. He puts the house and furnishings his father gave him under the hammer, then flies from distant parts back home. He happens to arrive when a girl friend is visiting his folks; her engagement is to be announced that night.

Ronald Colman

INCIDENTS TOO NUMEROUS to mention happen. Each one hits you like a smack in the face—a surprise! You fairly jump with the gleeful spirit of the occasion. That engagement is never announced; instead, the girl in the case declares her affection for the hero. He promises to settle down and be good forever. There is a lady—but he will never see her again. No, never, he swears it. But he doesn't know just how to break off this old affair of his; he finally goes to the "sweetie." The other girl, duly informed, breaks with him. Other entanglements come; but it all works out charmingly, and the fading out of Mr. Colman clasping and kissing the beauteous Loretta Young leaves you with a rich satisfaction of having seen a comedy that is one of the best things of its type that the sound screen has seen or heard.

THE DIALOGUE, generally trite in the talkies, is here teeming with humor; the lines are sophisticated and as far apart as the poles from the usual screen conversation. It is superb seasoning for this thoroughly pleasing picture and its hundred human touches, with its situations that defy you as you try to guess what is lurking around the corner for the next sequence. George Fitzmaurice deserves laurels for his direction; and Frederick Lonsdale, the author, merits the highest of honors for the story and the spoken word.

MR. COLMAN by no means eats all the histrionic cake. As the hero's father, Frederick Kerr is also stellar, and David Torrence is above par as the father of the heroine. Among the ladies, Miss Young reveals much ability; this is her best performance to date. And one must not forget a genuinely fine characterization turned in by Myrna Loy as the actress beloved by the hero. We just didn't think she could do as well.

THE OLD WINE DRAWN OUT OF CASK

There is nothing as dramatic as life itself! This was the thought the master producer, D. W. Griffith, had in mind when he purchased the screen rights to Lattie Blair Parker's stage play of New England rural life, "Way Down East."

Even in those days, when the so-called flapper and sex problems were just becoming the vogue, it was argued that the theme of "Way Down East" was old-fashioned; but Griffith reasoned that the great stories of literature that have lived through the ages have basically been concerned with the ordinary people of life and simple, straightforward dramatic problems that are easily understood and appreciated by each and all of us in our usual existence. The great success of "Way Down East" proved the soundness of Mr. Griffith's judgment.

This is the reason that "Way Down East" has been synchronized with the original musical score and elaborate sound effects, and is commencing a second world tour at the Majestic, Monday. Mr. Griffith has been approached several times to make "Way Down East" as a talking picture, but so far has decided against it.

"Way Down East" was authentically produced; it took a year in time, and many hardships and dangerous chances. And when Mr. Griffith thinks of duplicating the famous ice gorge scene, which was one of the most dangerous scenes ever made, he thinks probably he had better let well enough alone.

Elgar, Stravinsky and Strauss on Program

The fourth program of the Monday evening series by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, conductor, will take place next Monday evening in Symphony Hall at 8:15. The program will include Sir Edward Elgar's Introduction and Allegro for String Orchestra, Stravinsky's Capriccio for Piano and Orchestra, and Richard Strauss' "Symphonia Domestica." The soloist will be Jesus Maria Sanroma.

Povla Frijsh

Povla Frijsh, the Danish soprano, will appear in a song recital tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 at the Repertory Theater.

SUPERB BILL AT ORPHEUM

In addition to the screen operetta, "New Moon," Loew's Orpheum has a splendid vaudeville bill. Joe Phillips, diminutive comedy star, is the headliner. In addition to containing plenty of "hokum" and slapstick comedy, his act is punctuated by pleasing singing and dancing numbers rendered by his assisting company. Bryant, Raina and Young, a trio of unique dancers, present a repertoire of original dance creations that are novel and unusual.

Lenus and Searle are a riotous hit in an original and hilarious Pullman comedy sketch which they call "Berth Control." Sergt. Franklin and Ginger Royce are a prominent feature of the bill in a novel military skit in which jokes and comedy reign. Grace Dero in a novelty musical melange fills out the bill.

'Happy Days' Burlesque at Waldron's Casino

Waldron's Casino next week will have Laveda Gordon and her "Happy Days." Burlesquers. The "charmers," including Kurly Kelly, Caroline Purcelle, Jane Vitale and Minnie Rowland. The comedians include Ben Lerner, Jack Erickson, Sid Gold, George Brennan and Sam Goldman. The vaudeville is headed by the Tocsin Trio, Flavia, Mann and Vooman. Feature talking pictures complete the program.

Park Program

The triple program at the Park has for its first feature "The Lion and the Lamb," taken from a story by E. Phillips Oppenheim. The second feature is Buck Jones in a "Western," "Desert Vengeance," with Barbara Bedford. The third feature is chapter eight of "The Spell of the Circus," presented under the title of "The Baited Trap."

Burlesque Queen Takes to Arms

HELEN RAYMOND
EVER READY and asking no quarter, Miss Raymond becomes a belligerent defender of the higher as well as the lower arts in "Stepping Sisters" at the Lyric. Sketched by Charles Schmidt.

GUILD DRAMAS AT COLONIAL

Through arrangements by the Theatre Guild with the Erlanger management, the Colonial will house their forthcoming production, "Elizabeth, the Queen," with Lynn Fontanne, Alfred Lunt and the Theater Guild acting company in the notable play by Maxwell Anderson.

The acquirement of the Colonial marks the fulfillment of the original desire of the Theatre Guild in the choice of theater for their Boston productions.

The subscription executives of the Guild announce that seat allotments are being made and will be mailed to those who have subscribed in ample time prior to the engagement of "Elizabeth, the Queen," which begins March 9.

Scollay Screen

"Fighting Caravans" will be the feature at the Scollay tomorrow. In addition there is an unusual stage show of seven vaudeville acts.

Modern and Beacon

Plays Remaining

Frank Morgan in "Topaze" at the Plymouth. (Fourth week.) The way of the transgressor may be hard, but not in this amusing comedy of dishonesty and large profits. The last week.

* * *

"Nina Rosa" at the Shubert. (Fourth week.) Romantic musical drama laid in the historic land of the Incas. Richly embellished with a Sigmund Romberg score and voices to match every tune.

* * *

"Stepping Sisters" at the Lyric. (Second week.) Three former ladies of burlesque upset the peace and quiet of a fashionable colony in Patchogue, L. I.

Now the Morning Salutation

LORETTA YOUNG AND RONALD COLMAN
EGGS FOR TWO! Miss Young and Mr. Colman find themselves already well started on a hands-across-the-table romance in that gay, impetuous film called "The Devil to Pay." (Loew's State.)

Home Fires Blaze Merrily

IRENE DUNNE AND RICHARD DIX
THE HAND that rocks the cradle draws Miss Dunne and Mr. Dix into those tender sympathies that make "Cimarron" a never-to-be-forgotten story. There's adventure, too. Now at RKO Keith's.

STAR TO GET $300,000 FOR TWO PHOTOPLAYS

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor for Universal Service
Copyright, 1931, by Universal Service

Los Angeles, Feb. 14—The Constance Bennett-Warner contract has been compromised to everyone's satisfaction. Jack Warner, acting for Warner Brothers, and Charles Rogers, new head of Pathe, no less, tell me that everyone is happy. Charlie, who has grown up with the films, is a wise young man, but when he is dealing with Jack Warner he is meeting his match. So it's an arrangement that has advantages on both sides.

Connie makes "Common Law" first for Rogers then she goes to Warner Brothers for one picture, returning immediately to Pathe. After Pathe makes two pictures she returns to Warners for one more. But here is the catch. So that Pathe is perfectly satisfied, Miss Bennett must agree to make no other outside pictures while she is under contract to them. But with the salary of $300,000 Connie is said to receive from Warners for her two First National pictures nothing should upset her. Imagine earning so much money!

The little gossip-fest Wallace Beery and I had over the radio brought an avalanche of letters and telegrams. The very first came from William Bailey, who used to be an Essanay actor when we were at the studio. I would like to thank all our friends in person who remembered us with such cheerful messages, but the best I can do is say "thank you" in this column. Mary Pickford appears next week on the radio with me as our next guest star. Isn't that a scoop? Won't it be wonderful to hear Mary's voice over the radio?

I wonder if Mrs. Alexander Hamilton in real life was one-half as attractive as Doris Kenyon. Doris has been chosen to play Mrs. Alexander Hamilton in "Alexander Hamilton," the play starring George Arliss. This "Alexander Hamilton" is not a sketchy scenario written in a day, but instead it is based on a play written by Mr. Arliss in collaboration with Mrs. Mary Hamlin. If remember rightly it played for several years in New York. There is a great chance for interesting characterization in the story laid in the colorful Revolutionary days, George Washington, Thomas Jefferson, Chief Justice John Jay, General Phillip Schuyler and Count Talleyrand and others. These are the historical characters who figure in the play and Warners are trying to find actors who look the part. Julian Josephsin will write the adaptation and John Adolfi is the director.

50 ACTRESSES SOUGHT ROLE

To Hollywood, Irene Dunne is a brown-eyed prima donna who, shortly after her arrival in the film city, captured the coveted screen role, the part of Sabra Cravat in Radio Pictures' "Cimarron," now at RKO Keith's. Incidentally, she competed with 50 well known actresses for the part. Miss Dunne's ability, not only to look the ages of 18 and 70, but to imitate the voice of an aged woman, won her the prized role.

This is not the first time the actress has essayed such a part. In Ziegfeld's "Show Boat," she scored a hit as an aged woman, a factor considered in her selection for Sabra. "Cimarron" is Miss Dunne's second picture. She played the leading part in "Leathernecking," a marine comedy produced, by Radio Pictures. Before that Miss Dunne starred for a period of 70 weeks in "Show Boat," attracting the attention of William LeBaron, vice-president in charge of Radio Pictures' production, who signed her on a long term contract.

DRAMA SLAMS THE 'POLS'

Paris politicians, seeing themselves lampooned in Marcel Pagnol's record success, "Topaze," are actually enjoying the novelty. The satirical comedy, starring Frank Morgan at the Plymouth, under the auspices of the Professional Players, was produced modestly by Max Maury at the Theatre Varieties in September, 1928. This house is far from the beaten track of Boston theatergoers, but now, after two years, it is still selling out, the greatest success they have had over there since the memorable "Cyrano de Bergerac."

Uptown and Olympia

Winnie Lightner and Joe E. Brown star in "Sit Tight," now at both the Uptown and Olympia. Others in the cast are Robert Bosworth, Frank Hagney, Lotti Loder and Snits Edwards.

CONVICTS LIVE IN FILTH AT PRISON

(This is the fifth in the series of articles revealing conditions at Charlestown State Prison.)

By ALAN FRAZER

Four-fifteen. The prisoners in gray jackets, pants and caps, are filing out of the antiquated shops, where in the course of a year the best of them earns $35 for himself, although the prison books showed $300,000 profit out of $1,000,000 in sales to other institutions last year.

Hands in their pockets against the cold of late afternoon, they walk about the shoe-covered "bullpen," so many of them in one-acre enclosure that their surprising resembles the maneuvering of a battalion. Guards, with tin-can canes stand about.

Four-forty-five. The inmates are filing into the cell buildings now, as I watch from the rotunda, nerve-center of the prison. On three sides of me, the bars tower 20 feet high like the pipes of a mighty organ.

Beyond the bars to the south, north and west, stretch the long, high cell blocks which have stood there 85, 100 and 125 years—still in use, though monuments to a bygone civilization.

FILE TO SUPPER

The great organ speaks—it is the clatter of nearly 1600 pairs of boots. Young and old, all types intermingled, the prisoners come marching up, carrying their wooden sanitary pails.

They get their supper on aluminum dishes handed out on slides from the kitchen beneath the rotunda, a kitchen where, despite all efforts to keep it clean, is vermin-infested because of its age.

The prisoners march to their cells, the doors swing shut behind them and are closed, all the cells in each gallery by a single operation. Laying down their dishes, they turn and stand, one hand on the bars, while the evening count is made.

Five o'clock. The count is finished. Begins the evening of smoking, chewing, reading under the electric bulbs. Begins the 12-hour stretch in those vault-like cells.

All the cells are "plugged," as the prisoners say, except a few in the punishment block, the ghastly old Jesse Pomeroy cell with its walled-up front, and the three death cages in the Death House where the condemned await the end without a ray of sunlight to carry as a memory to the chair.

PUNISHMENT BLOCK

The punishment block is a row of dark cells without beds or other equipment, in an extension of the Cherry Hill building.

At the end of the row is a cell for punishment of those guilty of more serious violations of the rules. It's the "Blue Room" in Charlestown. In other states they call it the "Gorilla Cage" and by other appropriate names.

The "Blue Room" is a sweat-box with the heat turned on to accent the "life" out of a prisoner. Nearly dark. The occupant's outer suit of his is removed and he sits or lies huddled in a corner back of the doors, one of bars and the other of solid iron. There is a small heap of sawdust in one corner.

Sometimes the prisoners emerge from it with heavy colds. Always they are almost blinded temporarily. As in the other punishment cells, the fare is bread and water. Every newcomer to the prison spends his first 24 hours in one of the latter. That's the law.

In the rest of the Cherry Hill building, where the prisoners are housed two and three in a cell, the doors are also double. There are 12 cells with only one occupant each—the horrible cells, for never speak to other human beings. "Light solitary," the prison calls terms it officially, and "the perpetual plant."

Five minutes of nine, and one gong sounds in the rotunda. Nine o'clock and two gongs. The lights go out suddenly in the hundreds of cells, and 960 men are entombed for the night.

(In Monday's Boston Evening American, the writer will further deal with State Prison conditions.)

J. H. Sheehan Seeks Selectman's Berth

Joseph H. Sheehan, chairman of the Finance Commission of Watertown, is seeking the Democratic nomination for selectman at the primaries on Monday.

Jos. H. Sheehan

Sheehan is a native of Watertown and received his early education in public schools there.

He has served on the Finance Commission for the past six years and is the president and treasurer of the Thompson Box Factory of Cambridge.

Why Legion Wept as Loved 'Daddy' Retired

Following is the presentation speech made by Clement A. Norton, prominent member of the American Legion, superintendent of Commonwealth Pier, Boston, and city councillor from Hyde Park, when General Edwards relinquished command of the American Legion, in 1924:

General Edwards: You have just completed a year's arduous labor of love, serving as commander of the American Legion. The veterans here assembled have requested me to express to you their sentiments of gratitude, but it is an extremely difficult task to say "Thank you" to New England's most renowned soldier and one of the most beloved citizens that this section of our Nation has ever known.

Over yonder, stand a group of children, the children of veterans who were as yet unborn when you led their daddies off to war, but who have heard of you in song and story, and who love and respect you with a zeal and sublime devotion greater even than that of the veteran himself.

They, too, wish to say "thank you." But who can translate into words the precious sentiments of a child's heart, as pure and undefiled as the driven snow?

Words are inadequate to express the feelings at this gathering. We can but grasp you by the hand, and in the light of a common understanding, feel what words have never yet spoken—have never yet made articulate to the human race. Shakespeare, the greatest figure in all English literature, declared that words were incapable of expressing the deepest and most profound thoughts. Time and again, Keats, Shelley, Thomas Moore, Lord Byron and others have noted the inadequacy of words to express the deeper meanings of life.

Sacrifice to Serve
Gave Up Comforts at Call to Aid "His Boys"

Gen. Edwards, "service to fellowman" has been declared by philosophers, ancient and modern, to be a great ideal. A history of your life proves that you have, through your years, sought for the attainment of this maxim and to good avail.

Over a year ago a decree was made upon you to command the American Legion. Many felt that this was ruthless and unfair request that you had reached the afternoon of life where ease and comfort should prevail, but when the voices of the veterans were made known and the mandate was interpreted in a clear and resolute reply:

"If my boys want me, I'm ready!" and the beautiful estate at "Doneroving," Westwood, most appropriately and symbolically named, after a lifetime of roving the world as a soldier and sailor, Uncle Sam, one little of the good mearal for a year, as he traveled about the country in the interests of his boys."

A letter from humble parents in a far-off hamlet would bring the General, quicker than an official army order, to sit down in his home and tell, perhaps, about the boy who passed on. The veteran in the hospital longed for him and was never known to appeal in vain.

In the halls of Congress, in the Legislatures of the country, he was to be found pleading for the disabled, for the unfortunates, for the families of "his boys."

Fulfilled the Trust
War Mothers Gave Their Sons Into His Keeping

Gen. Edwards, the very mention of your name brings to our people the poignant memory of other days, of the hour when the great War President, the late lamented Woodrow Wilson, called the youth of the nation to arms. When the boys of New England came for-ward by the thousands from their shops, factories, stores and farms—boys, most of whom had never before been away from home and its beneficent influence. That was a day of trial and tribulation. That was the day that brought to countless mothers the shedding of oceans of tears. Overnight they grew old and gray.

Today, in your presence, the magnificent power of memory brings us back to that day. We see the heartbroken pare it, struggling between duty and love, as she kissed her boy goodby.

We see her standing in the doorway waving and waving, and hearing a grief no soldier ever was called upon to endure. We are with her at evening time and hear that appealing prayer:

"May God be with my boy tonight, wherever he may be!"

We see the boy as he enters the military cantonment and spends his first night away from home enshrouded in the rigid discipline of a military camp. We note him a few months later with face bronzed, body rugged and spirits overflowing with effervescent youth, as he crosses the rubber of submarine infested sea to face the mightiest foe the world had yet known.

Safe With "Daddy"
How Men Came to Love and Honor Their Leader

Anxious parents watched and waited. Stories that certain Army officers were inclined to be "hard-boiled" with the boys gnawed at their hearts.

But soon word came trickling home, to relieve thousands of New England parents, that General Edwards was a kindly man. Of how he fought to have his men properly clothed and fed; how he refused to allow them to go into battle without proper artillery protection; how he was never too busy to listen to the story of the lowest buck private.

In one humble home of Boston, the most cherished memento, is the last letter written home by a boy who gave his life at Chateau Thierry, reading:

"Dad: Sorry. I'm with 'Daddy' Edwards."

And so the venerable general was known to his men, not as Gen. Edwards, but by the endearing term "Daddy Edwards, and, as such, he is known to the people of New England and will be known for generations to come, for no virtue of the human heart is more cherished than that of kindness. Its glories have been sung by poets and sages down through the ages.

Saved Boy Shame
Incidents Like This Endeared General to His 'Boys'

The little children over yonder have heard the story from their parents of the day that a visiting general inspected the 26th Division, and a wee, scared, country lad, fresh from a New England hamlet, happened to be holding his little sister's improper military angle and the inspecting general commanded his aide to:

"Tear that boy down from that soldier's uniform!"

General Edwards, who was following, stepped up and said in a fatherly tone, aside:

"Hold on! Please don't do that for me. He has not had time to properly learn."

That boy was saved a demotion, and in later by gave his life to his country. He proved by his courage and devotion to duty that his General had made no mistake.

At a time when religious bigotry threatens to engulf our nation, what better example of toleration can we point to than the example set by the venerable General? To him, it mattered little what a man's religious color was.

A Michelangelo or a Raphael would have given us a sublime piece of art if present at the New Bedford Hospital when the late Father DeValles, hero chaplain of the 26th Division, passed out, suffering from wounds of the battlefield, awaiting his Maker, nearing the end he had but one request and that was:

"Will you please tell my general I want him."

Hero Priest's Friend
Prayers of Dying Father De Valles Are His

As Gen. Edwards entered that room of death, embellished with only a plain Crucifix set on the wall, the dying Catholic priest raised himself in the bed, embraced the Protestant general and whispered:

"Gen. Edwards, when I die and go to Heaven I am going to ask God to save a place for you and Mrs. Edwards!"

Shortly after, he passed to the Great Beyond.

Dear General: May He who controls all grant you many years of happy life, to dwell in our midst at your beloved "Doneroving," to bask in the afternoon of life in the sunshine of New England's gratitude, and

"Wherever you walk,
May cool shadows fan the glade."

The gift that I have been asked to present to you is small in intrinsic and relative value, but it is as deep as the rolling Pacific, in feeling, in significance, in the love with which you are held, and we ask you to accept it as such.

In the not far distant future, when our people build a monument to the men and women they love, high among them they will chisel the name of that kind-hearted soldier, Clarence R. Edwards, and the undying epitaph, written by New England's mothers, will read:

"He was kind to our boys, 3000 miles from home."

CHAPLIN WILL STICK TO FUN IN SILENCE

SANDWICHED TEARS

"People say that I like to sandwich a few tears in between the laughs in my pictures. That's not the idea at all. If I can make them weep with the beauty of an idea, that's something else again. And that's my object. First, I intend to wring the essence of comedy from every situation—to make them laugh. And then I try to weave the whole thing together until, in spite of its pie-throwing, it is a thing of beauty."

Notwithstanding the graying fringes of his hair, the tired lines about his mouth, Charlie Chaplin has the spirit of a very small boy.

He rebels at the formal social appearances required of him.

After his London visit, Chaplin will go to Japan to meet the Emperor. He revealed that he will visit Japan in April.

NO SERIOUS IDEAS

Speaking of the rumors that he is considering making serious pictures, Mr. Chaplin was most emphatic.

"I'm not going to do any such thing," he announced firmly. "I have no desire to play Hamlet, or go in for Greek tragedy. I'm going to go right on wearing funny pants and the shoes and a little mustache in my pictures until I run out of ideas—and I hope that's never.

"I wore my derby, my cane and my mustache in the first picture I ever made. It seemed to be a good idea, and I've stuck to it.

"It wasn't any particular inspiration. The director told me to work out a comedy make-up. I rummaged through the property room and picked up what I could find—and that's how Charlie Chaplin of the custard pies was born.

"I never intend to abandon the character. He is myself. Through him I can express more than I ever could hope to achieve through a serious medium.

"And my character will never talk. His art is pantomime. I won't say that I will never make a talking picture. I haven't any intention of it now, but some day, when I know more about it, I may play with sound.

"But I will never put words into the mouth of Charlie Chaplin as the movie public knows him. He will continue to have his say in silence, using his hands, his shoulders, his mustache, his eyebrows to express his emotions. He doesn't need words.

"Understand, I am not aiming my blow at the talking pictures simply because I have produced a silent one. The talk-es are here to stay. I just don't feel that talk is my metier."

"I'll stay in London a couple of weeks, perhaps," he said. "Then I'll go on to Paris, to Berlin, I want to find a little rest and relaxation, so I can work on the story for my next picture.

"I haven't the slightest idea yet what it will be. But I'll have it written by the time I get to Paris, and will start to work on it immediately."

As the car approached the city, Mr. Chaplin leaned toward the driver.

"Go down Broadway," he said.

"Let's find some light, some color, some cheer. The thought of those thousands of young men shut up in the gloom of Sing Sing still oppresses me.

"Ah, this is better. This is much better. It's great to be in civilization again, isn't it? Look—see that sign down there? It says Charlie Chaplin! Isn't it a gorgeous sign? Quite the nicest one in Times Sq., don't you think?

"I guess we might drop in at the tail end of the midnight show just for a minute—just to see if they still like it. The wheat cakes can wait."

And Charlie Chaplin, who has known enough success to make any other man blase, was out of the car and into the jostling Broadway throng, as eager and as excited as a boob coming to his first appearance on the big time.

Maine Lowers Flags to Pay Honor to Gen. Edwards

Augusta, Me., Feb. 14 (AP)—Flags on the State House were placed at half-staff today by order of Gov. Gardiner as a mark of respect to Maj-Gen. Clarence R. Edwards, "Daddy" of the 26th (Yankee) Division, who died in Boston.

Gov. Gardiner said flag on the Capitol would remain at half-staff until after the war-time commander's funeral.

"The news of the death of Gen. Edwards," said the governor, "brings sadness to the people of New England and particularly to the men of Maine and neighboring states who served under his command in the World War."

PERSHING AND HURLEY LAUD GEN. EDWARDS

Washington, Feb. 14 (AP)—Secretary of War Hurley and Assistant Secretary Payne, telegraphed their condolences on the death of Major General Clarence R. Edwards, retired, today to Mrs. Lucia E. Otis, sister of the general.

"General Edwards served his country for almost half a century of active duty, with loyalty and distinction, including 16 years of service as a general officer," said the War secretary.

"He served with outstanding ability in the Spanish War and the Pacification campaigns following. Later he commanded a brigade on the Mexican border and the 26th Division in France during the World War. In the performance of all his duties he gave wholeheartedly of his talents and strength. Having known him personally and admired his admirable qualities, I am deeply grieved by the passing and extend to you my heartfelt sympathy."

Assistant Secretary Payne's message read:

"Deepest sympathy in your bereavement. In your behalf, America has lost a noble citizen and the Army a gallant and inspiring figure."

Gen. John J. Pershing issued this statement:

"I have known General Edwards since we were cadets together at West Point and I regret to hear of his death. I have always admired his attractive personality which during his long army career won for him many friends and the regards of the troops he commanded."

ELY CONDOLES WITH SISTER OF EDWARDS

Governor Ely today sent the following letter to Mrs. Charles A. Otis, Gen. Edwards' sister and only surviving relative:

"My dear Mrs. Otis:

"I have just learned of the passing of your distiguished brother, Maj.-Gen. Clarence R. Edwards, and I hasten to extend to you my deepest sympathy, together with the sympathy of the people of the entire Commonwealth.

"He will long be remembered as the beloved leader of the sons of Massachusetts in war and in peace; fearless in the face of the enemy, a father among our people.

"We mourn with you.

"JOSEPH B. ELY.

"Governor of Massachusetts."

Acting Mayor Joseph McGrath addressed the following telegram to Mrs. Otis:

"I mourn with you most sincerely in the death of your valiant brother, one of the greatest military leaders our country has ever known. From the time of his graduation from the United States Military Academy at West Point in 1885 he devoted his entire lifetime to the welfare of the military activities of the nation.

"He was the finest type of American citizen and Boston cherished leader and companion of thousands of men. As in the death of a valiant for Truth, so he passed over, and all the trumpets sounded for him upon the other side."

SANDINO WON'T QUIT FIGHTING

Mexico City, Feb. 14 (AP)—Augustino Sandino, Nicaraguan insurgent leader, is determined to continue his fight for complete Nicaraguan independence until the last American Marine has left the country, his representative, Dr. Pedro Jose Cheda, said today.

The plan of the American State Department for withdrawal of Marines will not hasten complete peace in Nicaragua, as said, and any scheme for gradual withdrawal of armed forces from that Latin America warfare will continue for at least another year.

Dr. Cheda also said he was authorized to promise that when the Marines are withdrawn Sandino will disarm his men and retire.

DR. JEKYLL — MR. HYDE — MRS. FRANK HOLT, NO. 2 — FRANK HOLT (ERIC MUENTER) — MRS. FRANK HOLT, NO. 1 and THEIR CHILD . . . . . .

DO YOU REMEMBER the Cambridge Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde mystery, all wrapped up in the career of a man who called himself Frank Holt, after he had fled from Cambridge? Up to the time that he made a quick departure from the city across the Charles, he had been known as Professor Erich Muenter, instructor in German at Harvard University. It was in 1906 that Professor Muenter was being hunted as the murderer of his first wife that the news of the missing Harvard Professor became public property. Then came the news that J. P. Morgan had been shot and slightly wounded in his mansion at Glen Cove, Long Island. His assailant was identified as Frank Holt, instructor in German at Cornell University. The professor was located up at the Nassau County jail in Mineola, Long Island. There, the prisoner, shortly after he had been identified by reporters of the Boston Evening American as Professor Muenter, climbed to the top of a grating of the cell block and leaped to the concrete floor, killing himself. Muenter is shown as he appeared after one of Mr. Morgan's butlers had attacked him during the intrusion of the Morgan estate. Muenter's second wife buried her husband from their home in Texas. At the extreme right is a photograph of the first Mrs. Muenter, of whose death, by poisoning, he was accused. A child of Muenter by the Cambridge marriage is shown with the poisoned wife.

FURTADO WINS NEW TRIAL IN SLAYING

The Mystery of Geraldine

The Forged Note

CHAPTER 25

THE BOY told Colt he was inside the Peddler's roadhouse on Christmas eve.

"What were you doing up there?"

The boy turned first red and then white and hung his head.

"You don't remember," said Mrs. Planzen, who was distrustful of police honor.

"It's all right," the Commissioner told him. "I am not going to harm you."

"I broke in the house," confessed the boy. "But I didn't mean to steal anything. I was just playing rubber's eave."

"Anybody with you?"

"No sir."

"Did you break the window?"

"No, sir. That was broke a long time ago."

"Did you find anybody in there?"

"No, sir—not right off. It was all awful quiet. I was pretty cold. I stayed in the kitchen for a while, trying to get up the nerve to light the gas stove. Then I heard a noise and I got awful scared, and I was ashamed of that and finally, just to prove to myself that I wasn't scared at all, I sneaked up the back stairs. It was getting dark and I could hardly see my way and I walked on my toes. When I got upstairs, I was still more scared.—I don't know why, but I was sure there was somebody up there—I was afraid to go upstairs or down, either—so I jumped to the window in the hall and climbed out on the window sill. I let myself down by my hands when I saw it coming down the hall."

"Saw what?"

No Clothes On

"The ghost."

"What was it like?"

"It didn't have any clothes on and it was all covered with blood.

"Warren, was it a man or a woman?"

"It was a lady," answered the boy, beginning to whimper.

"A hell of a lady," said his mother, "even if she was murdered."

"What did you do then?"

"I ran home."

"Did you tell your mother?"

"Not a word," said Mrs. Planzen bitterly. And the ill-favored look she gave Warren boded ill for the presid-ential namesake's peace after our departure.

"Is that all you know about the case?" persisted Thatcher Colt.

"Did you see anything else up there?"

"No, sir. I went back the next day, but I didn't see anything. I was afraid to go in any more. But I liked to hang around—that is why you found me the day you came up there."

When we emerged from the house, Thatcher Colt was very thoughtful. At the corner, he stopped and chatted with the policeman stationed there—a youthful policeman, almost martinetish on finding himself face to face with the commissioner.

"Is there a locksmith near here?" Thatcher Colt asked him.

"Yes—right there," the patrolman replied, pointing to a basement shop across the street. A light was still burning in its tiny window.

Strange Thrill

The locksmith was a thin, wrazened old man with dark glasses.

"Ever see that before?" asked Thatcher Colt, drawing down the old-fashioned key with the blue ribbon.

"I made it."

"For whom?"

"A lady. I don't know her name."

"Describe her."

The description given by the locksmith differed slightly from the one furnished by the barber, in coloring, size, and general impression. But the method of obtaining the key, as the man narrated it, [illegible] exactly to later

DEATH VERDICT BY MIDDLESEX JURY UPSET

Court Holds Sentence Against Weight of Evidence in the Torch Murder of Wife

John Furtado, 32, of Portland st., Cambridge, found guilty last December by a Middlesex Superior Court jury of the so-called torch murder of his wife, Antonia, was today granted a new trial by Judge Nelson P. Brown.

At a brief session held today in Middlesex Superior Court, Warren A. Bishop, district attorney of Middlesex County, told the court he "assented to the motion."

Cannon based his action on the grounds that the first degree verdict was against the law and against the evidence. He asked that the verdict be set aside.

During the trial the Government alleged Furtado, assaulted his wife, causing a head injury, and then set fire to the apartment and aroused himself up with ropes as he was found by the firemen when they arrived on the scene.

Mrs. Furtado was found dead in her home Oct. 19. An all-night questioning by the police failed to shake Furtado's story that his wife was beaten to death by two strangers after they had tied him hand and foot, later setting fire to the house.

BOSTON MAN IN INDIA URGES POLICE QUIZ

Gandhi Favors James Plan for an International Inquiry Into "Brutalities"

Dispatches today say that at the subcommittee of Edward Holton James, a Bostonian closely identified with the movement for liberation of Sacco and Vanzetti, the Congress party working committee in New Delhi, India, is considering creation of an international commission to investigate charges of police brutality against Indians in the civil disobedience campaign.

The viceroy has declined to institute such an inquiry. It is understood Mahatma Gandhi favors an international commission as James suggests, possibly with a membership including two Americans.

PEACE BELIEVED NEAR.

James, who is in India, has stipulated that neither Indians nor Englishmen would be eligible for the commission, which would be composed only of neutrals.

A late dispatch today said Gandhi had requested an interview with the Viceroy of India, Lord Irwin, and settlement of India's troubled political situation was believed in many circles to be within sight.

Edward Holton James, wealthy Beacon Hill and Concord liberal, paid a fine of $75 in 1927 for assaulting a policeman and inciting a riot in connection with a Sacco-Vanzetti disturbance on Boston Common.

KIN OF NOVELIST.

James is a nephew of the late Henry James, world-renowned novelist, and of Prof. William James, Harvard psychologist. He is 46.

He has had a temperamous career. He spent more than three years in a German prison because he refused to recognize the government of the Kaiser or remain out of Germany.

U. S. to Return Man in $800 Postal Theft

Word was sent to the U. S. marshal in California today by Federal authorities here to bring Nathan Scheirner of Mattapan to Boston for trial on an indictment charging misappropriation of $800 from the Somerville postoffice. Scheiner, according to Boston postal inspectors, surrendered in Pomona, Cal. He forfeited bail here while awaiting trial.

FLU DEATHS ON INCREASE HERE

The number of cases and deaths of both influenza and lobar pneumonia increased this week over the corresponding week for the past five years, Deputy Health Commissioner Joseph Monahan announced today.

Seventy-six cases of influenza with seven deaths and 69 cases of lobar pneumonia with 24 deaths were reported to the Boston Health Department for the week ending today. The average of the corresponding week for the five years was 15 cases of influenza with two deaths and 49 cases of lobar pneumonia with 18 deaths.

Although the reported number of cases of influenza showed a decrease this week over last week, the number of deaths was almost twice as many. For lobar pneumonia the number of cases decreased two this week over last, but the death total last week exceeded this week by nine.

JEKYLL AND HYDE OF CAMBRIDGE

A Reporter's Story of the Famous Muenter-Holt Case

By DAN W. GALLAGHER

(Who worked on the case as a reporter)

Following is the first installment of another case in a gripping series of articles on famous New England murder cases appearing daily in the Boston Evening American.

THERE IS MORE mystery in the lives of human beings than is ever dreamed of by our story tellers.

The suggestion is not new. It is as old, in fact, as the first chronicles of the goings and comings of men and women; as old as the first newspaper; as old as gossip, which, after all, was the first crude report of the interesting or unusual activities of real persons.

But, perhaps, people have short memories and do not recall that ever so often there appears in the day's news some set of facts that makes the imagination of the novelists seem pale and dull.

This much must be granted: That seldom indeed has a more extraordinary story of double identity ever been revealed than that in connection with the career of the man who called himself Frank Holt for nine years after he fled from Cambridge, where, as Prof. Erick Muenter, instructor in German at Harvard University, he had slain his wife, Leona.

What novelist, however daring, would have the temerity to imagine that a doctor of philosophy, brilliant student and indefatigable worker, would poison one wife and desert her children, all with the utmost callousness, and then become a most affectionate husband to the wife found in his new identity, and a loving father to her children?

What writer, however eager for new plots, would offend the probabilities by creating the character of one who was scholar and poet, a character of gentle manners and thoughtful regard for fellow beings, and then transmute this character into a cunning dynamiter, intent upon murder and destruction?

FANTASTIC PLAN

What chronicler of the unrealities would venture to suppose that a criminal, ardently sought by the police machinery of a nation, could not only escape detection, even suspicion, but could completely reconstruct his life, not upon new lines, but upon precisely old lines and finally be dragged from obscurity by a series of startling, unthinkable crimes?

Has any writer, living or dead, ever conceived such a situation as stood frankly exposed in Muenter's last days. Here was a creature of solid bearing, of gentle manners, of high intellectual attainments, who actually believed he could force his way into the mansion of the great American financier, J. P. Morgan, drive Mr. Morgan's wife and children to an upper room of the house, hold them captives at the muzzle of a revolver for days, and thus compel Morgan to leave home free man and put on and shipments of war supplies to the Allies.

Sane held none but a crazy man could have conceived a notion so fantastic and impossible of execution as his plan to hold the Morgan family as hostages. But many others, skilled in observation and the dissection of man's motives, maintained that Muenter-Holt was as sane as the majority of his fellow beings.

This intense problem—that of insanity and motive—might have been solved had not the secretiveness of his jail keepers permitted him to die by his own act at the time he was most needed by the police.

PLUNGES TO DEATH

My first connection with this unparalleled case occurred in April, 1906. Muenter was being indicted as the slayer of his wife. My second connection with it took place in the summer of 1915, when I visited Glen Cove and Mineola, Long Island, N. Y., and wrote articles bearing upon its tragic denouement.

A man had forced his way into the Morgan mansion in East Island, Glen Cove, and shot and slightly wounded Mr. Morgan before being overpowered. Upon being lodged in the Nassau County jail in Mineola, Morgan's assailant was identified as Frank Holt, instructor in German at Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y.

Subsequently the prisoner was recognized as Muenter, fugitive from justice. Whereupon he admitted it, penned a pathetic letter to the woman he had wedded after disposing of his first mate—and plotted his own end.

When jail guards permitted him to exercise in the runway he climbed the steel grillwork fronting the tier of cells and before they could stop him plunged headlong to the death.

The day following his death I made the discovery that a man answering the description had rented a shack at Central Park, Long Island, in June. When detectives inspected that shack they came upon dynamite, fulminating caps and other bomb-making materials, together with papers which disclosed Muenter-Holt had attempted to blow up the Senate wing of the Capitol in Washington.

TWO PHASES OF LIFE

Records I have kept disclose that I visited Cambridge, Ithaca, Lawrence, Kan.; Chicago and Dallas, Tex., in tracing his career. The study I made of the information I unearthed falls naturally into two parts. And this enforced division is one of the greatest proofs that Muenter was Holt and that Holt was Muenter. Nothing is known of Holt's life prior to 1906.

Nothing is known of Muenter's movements after 1906. In that year, it must be taken for granted, Muenter, the fugitive, dropped his name with his beard and became Frank Holt, student and lover.

How this transformation was able to deceive the agents of the law is an extraordinary feature of the story, since Holt took up the life work that Erich Muenter dropped, since it was impossible for Holt to remold the face and figure that Muenter had worn, since Holt dressed as slouchily and walked as shamblingly as Muenter had dressed and walked, since not one but several men who had known Muenter intimately later

FANNING
—With GEORGE UNDERWOOD—

SPORT TIDBITS OF ALL SORTS

RUSSELL CHAPMAN, whose flying feet are going to make Bates more famous than the Stein Song made Maine, will confine himself to the two-mile college relay race and will not break from the barrier in any of the special events at the B. A. A. meet tonight. America's other two outstanding stars of the present time, Ray Conger and George Spitz, will be A. W. O. L. But cheer up, Clarice, enough college and club champs will be on hand to make the old Arena bulge out at the sides and a good time should be had by all. This is the athletic fans night to howl!

PINKY SOBER

Paul Keller, the Flying Frenchman, who came all the way from that dear Paree to test the mettle of Uncle Sam's limber legged sons, will measure strides with Pinky Sober—ah, there's a runner for you—George Bullwinkle and others in the special 1000. Phil Edwards, the bronzed Mercury from the Hamilton Olympic Club of Canada, will try to fling his feet into the faces of Eddie Roth of the Newark A. C. and Eddie Blake of the Boston A. A. in the 600.

With Conger an absentee Leo Lermond should gallop off with the coveted Hunter Mile but he will be extended by his clubmate, Sam Martin, Loring McMillen of the New York A. C., B. E. Estes of Harvard and Marshall Kingsbury of Providence.

GUS MOORE, the dusky distancer of the Brooklyn Harriers, will go to the post a heavy favorite over McCluskey of Fordham, Dalrymple of the home club and the rest of the field in the two mile special.

In looking over the athletic celebrities, tonight, don't forget to give Hal Osborn the once over. After 18 years of competition Hal still is able to get over the cross bar indoors from a board take off at 6 feet 6 inches. He is second only to George Spitz, that remarkable young N. Y. U. freshman who can outjump anything on two feet and most things on four.

Monte Wells, world's record holder in the 45 yards hurdles, will have to top the timbers in record form to beat "Red" Record of Harvard.

JIMMY DALY of Holy Cross will try for a third leg on the Major Briggs Trophy for the 45-yard dash. Claude Bracey of Texas and William Bruder of the Newark A. C. are among the speed kings who will oppose him. Those two streaks of greased lightning, Loren Murchison and Percey Williams, are among the past winners of the coveted trophy.

While the knights of the spiked shoes are burning up the boards in the Arena tonight, Harvard's knights of the steel blades, its unbeaten hockey six, will be crossing sticks with Dartmouth at the Boston Garden. Folks, that should be a shindy worth seeing! Harvard has been unbeaten in college competition. The Crimson's lone spanking was administered by the University Club.

BARRY WOOD

DESPITE THE GREEN stick wielders come from up there in the New Hampshire hills where King Winter holds old fashioned sway and the weather is always hockey weather, it will be a big surprise if the Hanoverians take the Crimson scalps into camp. Barry Wood & Company are the strongest aggregation collegiate ice has seen in years.

Ochone! Ochone! It looks as if it was going to be a case of the Crimson above the Green.

BILLY NEWMAN, who last Monday died on his 59th birthday, ran the old Longacre A. C. in New York in the days which followed the repeal of the Horton law. It was located in West 39th st. in the heart of the old Tenderloin. The club held forth in the queerest of places—the vestry of a colored church.

In the same room in which on Sunday the parson exhorted his flock to turn the other cheek we saw some of the most savage fights in ring history. Johnny Dundee, K. O. Brown, Young Ahearn, Jack Britton, and other famous fighters, got their baptism of fire in Newman's little old Longacre A. C.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, later President of the United States, then governor of New York, signed the repeal of the Horton law. Joe Gans and Dal Hawkins fought their famous fight the last night of the Horton law. Hawkins dropped Gans in the first. Joe knocked Dal colder than a landlady's heart in the second. The repeal of the Horton law went into effect at midnight, the night of the Gans-Hawkins battle.

JIM BUCKLEY ran another famous fight club of the Longacre A. C. era, the old "club membership" days. It was the Stanley A. C. Many Boston scrappers have fought in it. Jim was a fiery tempered Celt in perpetual war with the sports scribes. Tad Dorgan, the great "Tad," took especial delight in getting Jim's goat. Once Buckley got so riled at Tad that he leaned over the ring ropes and roared:

"TAD" DORGAN

"There's a red headed, double jointed, pigeon breasted, fork tongued codgemehon in this house who has been tellin' a lot of lies about me in the paper!"

Then glaring down on the gigging Tad, Buckley roared:

"I'm not sayin' a wor-r-d! But I'm lookin' right at him!"

TAD WAS the gamest man this writer ever knew. From the front firing line of sport and the center of newspaper activities, Dorgan suddenly was confined to his room. There he remained for years with the Grim Reaper's scythe constantly hovering over him. Dying, confined within four walls, game, courageous old Tad never lost his good nature, his sense of humor, his perspective and he kept drawing masterpieces of cartooning that will live through the years.

BILL TILDEN, whose tennis professionals will appear in the Garden next week, and Francis T. Hunter, who followed Big Bill into pro-ranks, are the Damon and Pythias of the courts. They have been pals for years. Both Tilden and Hunter are wealthy. Money did not lure them into pro ranks. At one time Hunter owned a string of suburban newspapers. He still controls three.

Baseball managers seem to think that Big Ed Morris will make good under Shone Collins. Big Ed was rated so highly a few years ago that several big league clubs tried to snare him from the Red Sox. The Yankees in particular were hot on his trail. With the lowly Red Sox Morris couldn't seem to put his heart in his work. Collins is expected to furnish Morris with the needed inspiration.

Parisians protest because the Panama Al Brown vs Nick Bensa fight was held in Salle Pleyel, a hall hitherto exclusively devoted to music. There apparently wouldn't have been any kick if the bozoes had met in a ballroom.

Harvard's triangular meet with Dartmouth and Cornell here in the Garden one week from tonight is the twelfth conducted by the three colleges. Dartmouth, Harvard and Pennsylvania started it in 1917. Cornell supplanted Penn the next year and the Crimson, the Green and the Red and White have met annually since.

Remember the prediction that Lou Gehrig would sign before the week end? Lou put his John Hancock on a Yankee contract yesterday.

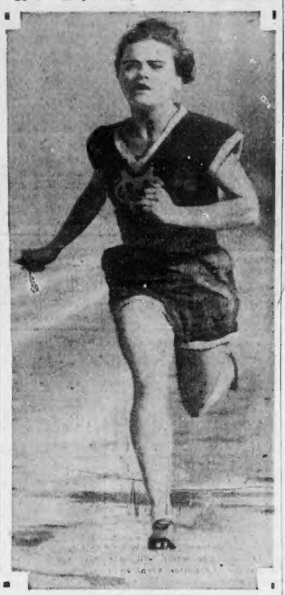
TWO SPRINT QUEENS AND FRENCH ACE IN B. A. A. MEET

STELLA WALSH

PAUL KELLER



MARY CAREW

STELLA WALSH OF CLEVELAND, the world's fleetest woman, and our own Mary Carew of Medford, who flung her tootsies in the face of Stella last year and may do it again tonight, will renew their rivalry at the big B. A. A. games in the Arena. Paul Keller, the French flyer, 800-meter champion of France, will make his Boston debut against a fleet field in the 1000-yard run. The athletic clans should pack the Arena until it bulges out at the sides.

ADAMS BUILDS UP NEW TEAM

Immediately after the consummation of the purchase of the Tigers, as told in the Boston Evening American yesterday, President C. F. Adams started to strengthen the minor league outfit.

He recalled Lloyd Kline from Syracuse, where he was on loan, sold Guy McNeill, Paul Runge and Bill Brander outright to the Powers outfit, purchased Yip Foster, but allowed the big defense man to remain with the Tigers, and then announced that the club would soon be further strengthened.

Under the Adams-Ross-Powers regime, the Tigers, or as they will now be known, the Bruin Cubs, will be a powerful factor in the Can-Am League.

Beaver Boxers Meet Blue Squad Tonight

The Technology boxing team meets the Yale boxers in a regular intercollegiate meet at New Haven tonight.

Capt. Carl Orleman of the M. I. T. team, who won every match last year except one via the knockout route, is in fine shape and won his last two matches against the Navy and Catholic University decisively.

O'Kelley May Battle Bongalia for Argonne

Con O'Kelley of Irsland and Michael Bongalia of Italy, having an argument to settle growing out of their bout in Providence, may meet in the feature bout of a tourney to be staged by Eddie Mack of the Argonne A. A. on Thursday, February 26, at the Boston Arena.

If You Don't Know

Bill Carey, 18-year-old son of the president of the Madison Sq. Garden Corp., has become a fight manager . . . His fighter, Joe Ghnouly, a St. Louis featherweight, will be on the Garden's card of February 20 . . . Havorford College refers to its cricket team as an XI . . . Yale's basketball team has played four games in New York this season and lost every one . . . The Blue quintet has dropped only one other contest . . . The eleventh hole at the Belmont Springs Country Club separates Belmont, Arlington and Lexington . . . Bud Cashman, former all-around athlete at Worcester Academy, is now rated as one of the greatest billiard players in New England . . . The rear door of Jesse Guilford's home in Newton leads to the sixth fairway at Albemarle and the Siege Gun plays four holes of the course almost every day . . . Bruce Caldwell, former Yale football star, has acquired an option to purchase the New Haven club of the Eastern League.

Nine Cubs Leave for Training Camp

Chicago, Feb. 14 (INS)—Nine Chicago Cubs players, two coaches and one trainer, the advance squad of pitchers and catchers, left today for the Catalina Island spring training camp.

Manager Rogers Hornsby will put the advance guard to work at early conditioning exercises Wednesday when they arrive on the isle in the Pacific ocean.

VINCE DUNDEE CLAIMS TITLE

New York, Feb. 14 (INS)—Vince Dundee, swarthy, wall-eyed New Jersey Italian, whose brother, Joe, once held the welterweight crown, was preparing today to lay claim to its middleweight title as a result of his second victory over Len Harvey, Europe's best 160-pounder, in a 12-round bout at Madison Sq. Garden.

But titles are won and lost only in the ring, and although Mickey Walker is not recognized as the middleweight either by the National Boxing Association or by the New York Boxing Commission because he prefers to mingle with the heavyweights, Dundee's title claim will remain a synthetic one unless he turns Walker or the latter relinquishes his diadem.

"In N. B. A. undoubtedly will recognize Vince as the champ without further ado.

Max Waxman, Dundee's manager, said today he would guarantee Walker $75,000 for a tituiar match with Vince. Madison Sq. Garden last up Dundee for the next year and would like to stage the bout.

Harvey's supporters declared he had been robbed for the second time. But they pay off on decisions, and the referee and one judge voted for Dundee, with the other judge picking Harvey.

Yale Five Defeats Holy Cross, 47-20

New Haven, Feb. 14—Yale basketball team easily defeated Holy Cross, 47 to 20, here. Yale led from the start and in the second period held the visitors to one field goal and six fouls. The score at the half was 18 to 12.

Harvard Six Plays Dartmouth Tonight

By BILL GRIMES

In the opening game of their annual home and home series, Harvard and Dartmouth clash tonight at the Boston Garden.

As Harvard-Dartmouth tilts are always featured by heavy checking and keen rivalry, there is no better college attraction. There has been a fine demand for tickets and a large delegation from Hanover will be present to witness the Green's only appearance here this season.

Until upset by the University Club this week, Harvard had met and defeated many of the strongest clubs in this country and Canada. Due to the break in training made necessary by mid-year exams, Harvard was not up to form against University.

Coach Joe Stubbs has developed three forward line combinations and two sets of outer defense men. Johnny Garrison will start at center ice with Cunningham and Everitt on the wings, Cunningham was shifted to the front line from the defense at the start of the season and has lived up to the faith and confidence Coach Stubbs had in him, while Everitt is steady and effective, if not as flashy as the other two members of his unit.

Barry Wood, captain-elect of the Crimson football eleven, will work on the second line with Saltonstall and Baldwin. Wood is one of the finest all-around athletes that ever matriculated at Harvard.

Lineup at Garden

HARVARD	DARTMOUTH
Cunningham, lw	Saltonstall, Fell, rw

Wood, Putnam, c	c, Morton, Allyn, Manchester
Everitt, Baldwin, Martin, lw	rw, Rockhill, Faegre

Battery A Four to Play Artillery

The Boston Indoor Pony Polo League will revert back to the original schedule for tonight's program at the Commonwealth Armory after revamping the schedule a couple of times during the week.

Battery A will oppose the 110th Cavalry in the main event and the 103rd Field Artillery will clash with the Harvard Jayvee's in the preliminary.

Lermond Not to Race Conger on Monday

New York, Feb. 14—Leo Lermond of the B. A. A., who was entered to race Ray Conger of the Illinois A. C. in the Baxter mile of the New York A. C. meet on Monday night, has cancelled his entry in the meet here.

Lermond, who was beaten by Conger a week ago in one of the fastest miles ever run indoors, was expected to push Conger in the Baxter mile. Lermond races in Boston in the Hunter mile of the B. A. A. games tonight, in his second race of the week.

It is believed that the Boston runner was not willing to run another race here Monday after such a brief rest.

By BILL CONNELLY

The world's two fastest women sprinters, Mary Carew of Medford and Stella Walsh of Cleveland, will leap from their marks in a special sprint that will be one of the many features of the 42nd annual B. A. A. games in the Arena, tonight.

The Medford Miss was led to the tape by the Cleveland Streak in the Millrose Meet in New York last week, but "Our Mary" hopes to turn the tables on the great Stella, tonight.

The duel between the two fleet Dianas is the first woman's event, that ever took a place on the B. A. A. program. It shows how women are coming to the front for athletic favor.

The 26 event program is replete with world - class events, of which George Underwood tells you about in "Fanning." In addition to the feature events there is great interest in the relays, particularly the clash between Boston College and Bates in the two-mile relay. Harvard and Yale in their duel, and Boston College and Holy Cross in the one-mile.

Russ Chapman to Run Anchor for Bates

The great Russell Chapman will run the anchor leg for Bates and may pull the Maine college to victory although the Eagles have four flyers, each of whom can turn a half mile in two minutes or under. The Eagles will have to hand Moynihan a 25-yard lead at the end of the third leg to stave off the great finishing rush of Chapman.

Harvard's flying four, Dodge, Pearson, Munroe and Record, is favorite over Yale, but the Blue may surprise the Crimson. Word came up from New Haven early in the week that the Blue had a great relay team.

B. C. and Holy Cross May Furnish Thrill

The one mile duel between Holy Cross and Boston College may furnish the big thrill of the meet. If Jim Fleet and Bernard McCafferty get away on anywhere near even terms on the last leg the fans will see a race which will warm the cockles of their hearts.

There is a tip out to watch Louise Stokes, the colored girl of the Onteora Club, who will meet Stella Walsh and Mary Carew in the women's sprints. Louise is said to have done sensational time in training. Olive Hasenfus and Mary McGlone also will make the two favorites step some.

BOXING CZAR TO BE ADVOCATED FOR STATE

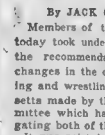
OLD BOARD WOULD BE ABOLISHED

By JACK CONWAY

Members of the Legislature today took under consideration the recommendations for the changes in the conduct of boxing and wrestling in Massachusetts made by the special committee which has been investigating both of these sports.

It was pointed out by members of the Legislature that the report of the investigating committee is not a part of any law and that for any of it to become effective it must be accepted by the Legislature.

The principal recommendations called for the abolition of the present Boxing Commission and the appointment of a single director of boxing who would be answerable to an appeal board, approval of title bouts, announcement of the votes of judges and referees, draw bouts, reduced license fees for preliminary boxers and license fees for clubs depending on seating capacity rather than the location of a club



Jack Conway

The fact that the committee was going to make such recommendations was told readers of the Boston Evening American back in November when the committee was holding special executive sessions at the State House.

This writer suggested to the committee 15-round bouts, draw decisions, public announcement from the ringside of the votes of judges and referees, a cut in license fees for the preliminary boys and small clubs and a time limit on the length of amateur tournaments.

The committee has also recommended that all amateur shows end by 12.30 at night and that no boy be allowed to compete in more than three bouts. This is a move in the right direction and carries the result of this writer's testimony before the committee.

Health of Boys Ruined by All Night Boxing

Hundreds of boys have had their health ruined by boxing in tournaments which have not ended until 3 o'clock in the morning. They have spent the night in dressing rooms waiting to enter into action in another bout

The committee also adopted in part a suggestion from this writer in regard to fouls. The committee in its report says it is unfair to the winning on fouls. It suggests a rule which would cause a boxer who hit low to lose the round. He would be disqualified after three offenses.

The committee, however, allows for the winning on a foul in the event a boxer says he is unable to continue and this claim is allowed by a majority vote of the judges and referee. A faking boxer, however, will forfeit his purse if the rule is against him

The committee insists that boxers shall be equipped with protectors which will keep them from getting injured by a low blow

Matchmakers Must Get Commission License

The committee would put matchmakers under the control of the commission. In the event it was found that a matchmaker was interested in a boxer, he would lose his license

Announcers would also be licensed. At present the commission only approves of a club announcer, but has not any control over him. The committee hits at the rule of the Commission which only allows main bout boxers appearing in the following tournament to be introduced. It favors a broader rule which would allow celebrities to be paraded into the ring

The one man commission plan the committee feels, would enable the state to secure the services of somebody who would devote all of his time to his boxing duties. A check would be put on the Boxing Director by allowing interested parties to appeal to a board consisting of the attorney-general as one of its members, Director of Public Safety and a member of the executive council to be named by the Governor

The committee found that the present Commission was honest but that it believes the suggested change would be an improvement.

The committee has not as yet made mistakes, but nobody claimed any of them ever committed a dishonest act.

The committee stated that only two persons appeared at its meetings attacking wrestling and that was on to state that wrestling has at times been hippodromed, but added that such occurrences have unfortunately happened outside of this State.

The committee voted against putting wrestling under a commission as it feels the public is satisfied with the sport. It does favor however, making it necessary for the promoters to advertise their contests as "exhibitions."

The full report will now go before the various committees in the House and Senate after which it will be submitted to the Legislature for action.

Swimming after their fourth straight victory, the Harvard varsity swimming team will meet Syracuse in the New Gym pool at Cambridge today

Admirers Mob Londos After Mat Victory Over Dusek

By MR. BOSTON

Ten minutes spent in Jim Londos' dressing room following his victory over Rudy Dusek in 48 minutes 52 seconds, convinced me of this fact.

They had a couple of cops stationed outside of Londos' dressing room. It was the duty of the guardians of the law to see that Londos wasn't annoyed while he was getting his rubdown

But what care several hundred pop-eyed Greek wrestling fans for a couple of hired cops? Not a thing. They tossed aside the cops without hardly a struggle and crashed into the inner sanctum, where Ray Fabiani, Ed White and a flock of lesser lights were administering to the needs of Londos

They showered Londos with their embraces and words of congratulations. Some of them brought gifts and undoubtedly when the smoke of battle clears White will claim his cut as manager

Londos stood there before his admirers with the regal grace which always made Jack Delaney popular with boxing fans. He made each greeter feel as if he were the only person in whom he was interested. All of which won't hurt the Londos ballyhoo.

Londos Has Speeded Up Mat Style

"It is great to get back to Boston again," said Londos. "I have been treated very well here. Maj. O'Keefe, president of the Boston Garden, has been particularly kind to me.

"I was pleased to hear that the sports writers and fans liked my work against Dusek. I think they found I am an improved wrestler over the Londos they saw here five and six years ago.

"I weighed 199 pounds for my bout with Dusek. I was in the best possible condition and was glad my victory was decisive."

Londos has speeded up his mat style. The Greek champion realizes the public now demands its wrestling thrills in large packages

"One must keep on his feet more than was necessary a few years back," went on Londos.

"The fans demand action. They will not tolerate a wrestler lying on the canvas with his hands clamped on an opponent's body for five minutes.

"I have combined the new and the old styles of wrestling. After all, one must have the necessary holds to make a real hit with the fans. The flying tackle is spectacular, but the fans also like to see a man who combines action with a knowledge of the fine points of the game."

Garibaldi Wins From Milo Steinbach

Gino Garibaldi, Italian heavyweight, won from Milo Steinbach of Belgium in the semi-final, with a flying tackle and body lift and slam in 18 minutes 32 seconds Garibaldi is quite an idol with the Italians. He is a big, strong fellow and given plenty of action

I find that wrestling crowds want action more than anything else. This is the chief reason for the new popularity of wrestling It furnishes the spectacular during a period when boxing has been offering some sour exhibitions.

Tiny Roebuck, Indian grappler, added one more to his list of victims when he upset Andy Zaharoff of St. Louis with an arm bar, inside crotch lift and slam in six minutes and 23 seconds

Tom Marvin, another Indian brave, conquered Firpo Wilcox of Oklahoma, in 17 minutes 50 seconds

A crowd of 8000 attended the show. Another large gathering witnessed the Lutze-Wykoff bout at the New Boston Arena the previous evening, all of which proves that the public likes its wrestling

ROCKNE FACES $9000 SUIT

Los Angeles, Feb 14 (AP) An echo of the charity football game here last December between former Notre Dame stars and a Western South eleven sounded today with the sponsors and Coach Knute Rockne arguing over $9000 expense money.

Rockne, who arrived yesterday on business, and Frank S. Hutton exalted ruler of the local Elks' lodge that sponsored the game, exchanged verbal punts. Hutton finally indicated he would demand an immediate accounting of the $9000 advance by the Elks to bring the Irish here

"Unless an accounting is made by Rockne," Hutton said, "I intend to take the matter up with the board of governors of the Elks' Building Association and recommend the filing of a civil suit in Superior Court Monday"

Hutton charged that less than $1000 of the $65,000 gate in the contest went to the fraternal organization's charity fund

Hutton asserted that in addition to the $9000 advanced to Rockne $1500 was paid "Hank" Anderson coach in charge, when the Rocknecruits arrived, while still another $500 was necessary to bring Joe Savold from Chicago to perform

Instead of 20 Notre Dame players, including Savold, 20 gridders minus 'Jumping Joe," showed up for the game, Hutton said Rockne said, "Everything was carried out as promised to Mr. Hutton. Every penny of the expense money was used to bring the players to Los Angeles. Furthermore, I had to use some of my own money, but it was for charity, and I'm glad I spent it. Jumping Joe went professional during-making of arrangements for the game.

"I had to obtain his services through his manager in Chicago. If he got anything from Hutton it's not my affair. I'm not responsible for Joe any more. The same thing applies to the $1500 Anderson got. I fail to see why I should be held accountable for anything they arranged between them"

Boston Boys Bid for Local Team Berths

By JOE CASHMAN

A dozen and one Greater Boston boys will fight for berths on our two local big league teams this season, 10 with the Red Sox and three with the Braves

There was a time when numerous sons couldn't beg borrow or steal a Southern trip with either outfit, but the success elsewhere of Mickey Cochrane, Bump Hadley and other local stars who were overlooked by Tribal and Fenway scouts, taught the Hub magnates a lesson Now they are strong for home talent

Somerville and Newton Are Well Represented

Whether or no any of these boys make the grade, it is good policy on the part of the Sox and Braves to give them a trial, for each has hundreds of admirers who are bound to become faithful followers of the club which has taken him on

Somerville home of several major league heroes and Newton each has two representatives on the 1931 Boston rosters, while South Boston, Dorchester, Brighton, Brookline, Malden, Hull, Wakefield, Duxbury and Brockton each has one

Somerville's hopes are Danny MacFayden, veteran pitcher, and Jimmy Galvin, rookie catcher, both of the Sox Newton's prides are Freddie Maguire and Hal Wagner, second baseman and catcher, respectively of the Braves

The other Sox who hang their pins in this vicinity are Pitchers Bob Weiland of South Boston, Andy Maisney of Malden Justin McLaughlin of Brighton, Charles Cronin of Brookline Frank Milliken of Walpole and Sumner Collingwood and Infielders Buth Marshall of Dorchester and Paddy Creedon of Brockton

The third member of the Wwam home guard is Bob Brown a kid pitcher from Hull

MacFayden and Maguire are the only two of the 13 who are fairly certain of being retained through the season, but as will happen several points of local pride enthusiasm by their doings during the six-week spring training period which will start a week from tomorrow

Webb and McSwain Sign Contracts

Earl Webb, the Sox best hitter last season signed his 1931 contract today So did Clifford McSwain fourth outfielder from Mobile

Webb, secured early last season from Washington, became the regular right fielder after a very slow start and is expected to hold down that berth throughout the coming campaign

McSwain is an iron pea ball twirler with a Czech Rugby Hall of Fame behind him, predicts that the Mobile kid will make the grade his very first season up

GOOD GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON
Golf's Greatest Teacher

The forward swing is an underhand pulling or punch with regard to your right hand and arm. If you have skipped a few words and sentences, go back and know what "an underhand pull or punch" means. Then read the following sentence, appearing to stop all motion and stay where they are. The left hand does not actually stop, but the centripetal pull of the clubhead is like a string on a whirling reaching the bottom point of its circle where it appears momentarily to stop, then starts upward and forward. Just as in your swing is the place where you must keep your head back

Passing the Puck

Fans who delight in watching a game featuring heavy but clean body checking, are missing something if they pass up the Harvard-Dartmouth game at the Boston Garden tonight.

Although the collegians have not mastered the finer arts and crafts of the cross winter sport, some of them can give the pros a lesson in hitting the bones of opponents with body checks.

In the Harvard-Dartmouth game two of the leading Eastern quarterbacks, Barry Wood and Bill Morton will oppose each other. Wood and Morton are centers on their respective hockey teams, and as both are exceptional players their work will be well worth watching.

The Tigers are all primed for the New Haven Eagles tomorrow night. They gained considerable confidence from their victory over the Rhode Island Reds and are out to more firmly secure themselves in third place of the Can-Am League

As vouched for by the return of Peaches Lyon to the Bruins, National Hockey League trade rumors and sales are still unfathomable mysteries

Jerry Conby, who has been working out in the nets during Bruin and Tiger practice sessions this season, is developing into an efficient goal minder. Jerry is learning the finer points of the game from two exceptionally well posted coaches, Tiny Thompson and Benny Grant. Both have the right natural ability and nerve, he is going places

Eddie Shore is of the opinion that Joe Lamb of Ottawa is one of the greatest centers in the game. In fact he rates the Ottawa line, Kilrea, Lamb and Darragh with the best in the N. H. L.

According to the official records of the National Hockey League, Jack Pratt is a member of the New York Rangers and Art Gagne is still playing with Les Canadiens

Until this eastern trip, Vic Desjardines of the Chicago Blackhawks had only scored one goal He came through with his second tally of the season against the Bruins, and then caged the winning goal against Ottawa.

Eddie Shore and George Owen have amassed more points for goals and assists than any defense men in the league. Also, they have been more successful collectively than most of the forwards. Shortstops his teammate, Owen, by five points, with a total of twenty one

Although "Ted" Beattie spotted the boys many games, he is now right up in the running for individual honors with ten goals and nine assists. Beattie is well on his way to stardom in the National Hockey League

DEAR MR. KABIBBLE DOES THE AVERAGE GIRL PREFER A RICH MAN? THE THOUSANDS CALLING ME UP, HAVE BEEN MISINFORMED

TODAY'S TRUE STORY

Love Balks Poisoner

"JIMMY, I'm afraid."

Beth Hardy ran her fingers through her short cropped, gold-red hair. She looked furtively toward the sick room just behind her. When she threw herself into Jim Bradford's arms he was startled by her trembling.

Then he burst into convulsive almost hysterical sobs.

It hardly seemed possible that this could be the girl who only three weeks before had rolled one down to the 18th hole, sunk a 20-foot putt to square away the match and then won out with a birdie on the extra tee-off for the women's golf championship at the Country Club.

"You're all upset," he told her gently, smoothing the hair she had ruffled, patting her on the shoulder, pulling her closely to him with one arm. "Your grand daddy is a sick man of course, sweetheart, but the doctors are doing their best. These nervous cases take a lot of time. Just you try and take it easy."

After a time the girl seemed to become more quiet, though she kept casting furtive glances back into the hall toward that room where old Captain Hardy lay bed-ridden. Only when Jim Bradford made a move to go did she show signs of another breakdown.

"Jimmy, please, don't go away."

And to that wild pleading in her eyes he bowed his head.

He hadn't intended to eavesdrop. But, after Beth had been induced to go to her room, Jim Bradford sank into a porch chair on the porch running across the room she had assigned to him across from the room where old Captain Hardy lay tossing on his bed.

"Remember, nurse, directions must be followed to the letter"—and the voice of Doctor Marshall, the sick man's son-in-law, came out to him through the open window. Something about that voice was harsh and intensely cruel. Subconsciously Jim Bradford distrusted both voice and man.

Daylight found Jim Bradford walking through the grounds. Sleep was out of the question. He sensed, rather than knew, that he faced a problem of hidden menace.

Breakfast found him facing a quieter Beth Hardy, but a Beth Hardy in whose eyes there still were traces of a sort of haunted look.

"How long, Beth, has your grandfather been under the care of Dr. Marshall?" he asked her.

"Ever since the doctor came here to see him, six months ago, when grandfather announced that he'd made his will. You remember how the papers featured that story, don't you, Jimmy?"

"Yes," he nodded. "The captain announced he'd put his whole estate in trust, in equal parts, for you, and for Dr. Marshall's son—you as the daughter of his only son, and the doctor's son as the child of his only daughter."

"And right after that Dr. Marshall began treating him. Told him that because of the time he'd spent in the tropics he needed heat and light, and began treatments of a special kind. Sometimes I think I'll go crazy, just being in that bright room where granddad is kept. It's just like being in a desert 24 hours a day. Even at night the room is brightly lighted."

Jim Bradford purposely manipulated his grapefruit spoon so that juice spurted toward the girl. In the apologies that followed the morbid subject was adroitly dropped. He had to go to town, he told her, but he promised to be back that evening. He went into the sick room, to see the patient for a moment, only to find him sleeping. He took occasion, while the nurse was in an adjoining room, to take some of the medicine in a glass, pour it into a bottle and slip it into his pocket.

Three hours later, in town, found him in the office of Detective Lieut. Tommy Lovett, already known on the force as "The Chemical Dick" because of his [illegible] of applied chemistry to the business of crime detection. For [illegible] an hour their heads were close together.

"Beth," he told the girl, at dinner time, "I'm going to have a specialist friend of mine look over your granddad, if it's all right with you."

There was deep inquiry in the girl's eyes, but some instinct told her not to ask questions.

Eight o'clock in the sick room found Jimmy, Beth, Dr. Marshall, the nurse and "Dr. Lovett" grouped about.

Lovett looked Marshall in the eye. "These lights," he said, are harmless, a mere subterfuge, but this red liquid"—and he took from his pocket the bottle Jim had brought him—"this red liquid is one of the most insidious poisons—"

But he didn't get any further, for suddenly Dr. Marshall did a surprising thing. He leaped for the door, and the others heard him running down the hall.

"Dr." Lovett started in pursuit. The sound of a shot out in the grounds halted him. He turned back into the sick room.

He looked on a tableau in which Beth Hardy placed her head on Jim Bradford's shoulder, and Jim, looking down at the old Captain, put out a hand which met that of the old seafarer.

THE BACHELOR'S VALENTINE

DRAWN BY Nell Brinkley

TO REDDETTE, Brownette and Blondette.

Valentine's Day again—and I—I still am a bachelor sending Valentines. Because the world is too full of different girls and women. Variety may be the "spice of life—that gives it all its flavor"; it may be "the source of joy below"—but it's the reason that I am a bachelor.

If all the women in the world were blondes—I'd hurry out and get me one. Yes, if all girls looked at you out of turquoise eyes under a wave of golden hair, I'd be a fast-married man by next Valentine's, sending pretty lacey papers, prettied with roses and hearts, and bunches of violets, to only ONE girl to set upon her dressing table.

If all women had bright brown eyes like woodland water over autumn leaves, and hazelnut-brown hair, I'd be lost today to the single life, if one of her would have me. Yes, if all girls were bright brown nixies I'd be smiling by now over my erstwhile struggles with a wedding-tie.

If all the girls were dark as night, black-velvet eyed, black-satin-haired, goodbye to my free fancy. Yes, if all the feminine world were snow-white in the glow, who, you remember, was black as coal, red as a [illegible] and white as snow, Valentine's Day would mean a present for my WIFE.

And if all the girls were those gorgeous things of flame greeny-grey-eyed RED-HEADS hurroo! I'd have been a fireside man long ago. Yes, if all the women looked at me from a color-scheme of copper hair, porcelain skin, carnation lips and moss agate eyes with sparks in them, I should have been on the honey moon ship for Bermuda years ago.

So here love and [illegible]-bearing flowers [illegible] on a bit of lace-paper our serenade. Our Valentine bearing our fervor and devotion is not to ONE girl, but to four! Not ONE is our duck, our darling, our cara posa, but four.

"Be our Valentine," we say to Reddette, Brownette, Brunette and Blondette. "We cannot choose between you!" NELL BRINKLEY

TIGER HEART

By Robert Terry Shannon

IF YOU ARE guilty it's only a question of time and you'll find out you most certainly will have to go to prison. What have you to say to us?" asked Garson.

The girl had stood listening with sullen, downcast eyes. When she spoke Garson was surprised at her self-possession.

"There's a lot of sense in what you've said, but you're picking on the wrong person," she said, in a dry voice. "The servants didn't steal them."

"Can you tell us who did, Mary?" Connie asked.

The girl's eyes looked straight at Connie and Garson, observing her, fancied he detected a faint hostility in her gaze.

"I've got my suspicion," Mary Smith said, "but, being only a servant, I'm going to keep my mouth shut."

Connie, her mother and Duke Garson all looked at the maid with quickening interest.

"So you suspect some certain person, do you?" Garson asked her, sharply.

"Yes, I do, since you asked me!" Mary Smith retorted. "You needn't put any suspicion on me, either, just because I'm a working girl. I've got a record for honesty, I have, and my folks before me, too."

The pale eyes were lit with emotion. "You needn't question me, though; I don't know anything. All I know is that I didn't take the pearls and I'm not afraid of policemen or constables, so you can call them if you want to."

"Look here—nobody is accusing you!" Garson told her, quickly, firmly. "We want your help. You say you suspect someone. Who is it?"

"I won't say."

"Oh, yes, you will say," he informed her. "You'll either tell us or you'll be taken in to the Stamford police and they'll make you talk, quickly enough. You're among friends here, Mary, and there's no use being sulky; you're only hurting yourself. Isn't that right, Mrs. Calvert?"

"Indeed it is," Mrs. Calvert told the girl. "I'm astonished at your attitude, Mary."

Mary Smith hung her head for a moment, a characteristic movement as though she was collecting her thoughts.

"You've been nice to me, Mr. Calvert, as long as I've worked for you, and I don't want to be disagreeable to you," she said, her voice flat and slightly twisted. "Maybe my suspicions don't mean anything, leastwise I got no proof, but if you want to know I don't think much of that new young lady, Miss Kitty, that's staying here."

"Mary! You shouldn't talk that way!" Connie exclaimed, warningly.

"You asked for it, and you got it," the girl returned, stubbornly. "All of you got me in here and tried to pump my ideas out—"

"You're right, Mary," Garson said soothingly. "We asked you to express your opinion—even if we can't agree with you. Come now, tell us, is it just that you don't like Miss Kitty, or do you have any reason to suspect her? After all, we're only trying to get at the truth."

"I don't want to talk myself out of my job here, but I'm not to be browbeat, either. I said I don't like Miss Kitty, and I stand to it."

"Why don't you like her?" Garson asked her.

"Well, for one thing, I think it's perfectly disgusting the way she's throwing herself at Mr. Tracy. Oh, I can see what's going on! She's brazen, I call it. If you want the truth you shall have it. This house ain't so small but I can see a few things. When Mr. Tracy's car came back last night it woke me up. I thought maybe something was wrong and I got up and went out into the hall."

She turned to Garson and told him in explanation:

"My room is on the third floor—the top floor—and I looked down over the balustrade. After Miss Kitty went downstairs and came back up again she hung around in the hall. Of course, she was waiting for Mr. Tracy, and pretty soon he came up. You can call it spying if you like, but I stood right there and looked down at them. She was wearing some sort of a silk dressing gown and I swear she threw herself in Mr. Tracy's arms and they stood there hugging and kissing. After that they moved outside and I couldn't see them. Some girls stoop to do anything."

Color came to Mary Smith's face and she breathed [illegible]. Neither Connie nor her mother had anything to say. Garson it was who spoke for them.

"That's why you suspect Miss Kitty for stealing the pearls?"

"I'm simply telling you what I saw and you can draw your own conclusions," Mary Smith said.

"Very well," Garson said. "That'll be all for the present. You may go."

As the door closed behind her Connie impulsively threw an arm around her mother's shoulder.

"It couldn't have been as bad as it sounded, the way the girl described it!" she told her mother. "As a matter of fact, Kitty and Jim have struck up quite a case. Just because she kissed him in the hall, even if she wasn't wearing a fur coat, is no sign that she is a bold, brazen creature. I'd have done the same thing myself if I happened to be crazy about a man. Mary Smith has a mean, suspicious mind—and I can't stand her."

But Mrs. Calvert was not as easily shocked as her daughter imagined. Harassed by the loss of the pearls and suffering too from recent nervous exhaustion she was slightly [illegible] [illegible] she smiled faintly.

"My goodness, Connie, I've got over being a prude so many years ago that I'm practically shockproof now. I must say for Jim, though, he certainly recovered quickly from his heartbreak over you, and what it amounts to is that we've heard a spicy bit of gossip, but nothing about my pearls. Have you anything further to suggest, Mr. Garson?"

Dreaded Typhoid Avoidable

Travelers Should Be Vaccinated

By R. S. COPELAND, M. D.

IMMUNIZATION against typhoid fever has been demonstrated to be of great value. Its results have shown the advantages that properly directed public health activities have accomplished.

Dr. Copeland

Typhoid fever used to be very common. During the Spanish American War it caused more suffering than did Spanish bullets. This disease is rarely if ever found in the army today. All soldiers in the army receive injections of typhoid fever vaccine.

In addition to this means of affecting protection sanitary control has done wonders. We may prevent the occurrence of typhoid fever by not permitting material contaminated with typhoid germs to enter our systems.

The germs are found in places where people are careless about sewage disposal. It is one penalty for failing to keep the water and milk supplies free from infection. Typhoid is a filth disease. Its occurrence represents ignorance or indifference on the part of some careless individual.

Among the signs of this disease are loss of appetite, coated tongue and intense headache. Occasionally there occurs nose bleed. Nausea and diarrhea are common signs. With these symptoms are severe aching of the back and legs. The fever rises one degree daily for about a week, continues for a time and the disease usually runs its course in four weeks.

Victims of typhoid fever should be given hospital care wherever possible. They will receive far better attention than is possible to give in most homes. At a hospital the patient is isolated with ease and there is no danger of spreading the disease to others.

The patient must be isolated until 10 days after the temperature reaches normal, and an examination must be made by the local department of health if the patient has been kept at home.

If you plan to visit the country or to travel abroad where sanitation is poor, you should take the precaution that is given our soldiers. You should be immunized against this disease. The procedure is simple and protects for a period of three to four years.

In view of the number of "typhoid carriers," many of them ignorant of the dangers they spread, it is well to be immunized. One never knows when he will be exposed to this disease. Anyhow, talk with your doctor about it.

She Can't Stay Heart-Broken

But Her Caller Causes Gossip

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a grass widow of 29 and have four children. My husband was shell shocked in the World War and deserted me four years ago, just before my baby was born. But one can't always stay heart-broken and I'm getting a divorce now. About a year ago I met a business man whom I liked and two months ago I invited him to play cards; he made a mistake in the number of the house and went to a neighbor's, who did a great deal of gossiping about his calling on me. I have not been to his place of business since, though I find it convenient to trade there. The joke is he only came once and then didn't see me. I have never thought of a second marriage, as I have too many children. But I don't enjoy all this gossip and teasing. M. W.

Beatrice Fairfax

Dear M. W.: A woman who has had as bitter experiences as yours needs friends, diversion, and something to give her a new point of view. Disregard the [illegible] club and shop where it is most convenient. Have your friends in to play cards, indifferent to the neighborhood [illegible] to you!

He Must Dance With Her

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am engaged to a girl who is crazy about dancing. I have never danced and don't care to learn. Since we shall not dance after we are married, I think Betty ought to begin now to live without. Do you suppose I like to see [illegible] dancing with other men? Will you please tell me how I can persuade her to be reasonable on this point? JOE.

Dear Joe: Why in the world should Betty give up dancing? The suitable thing would be for you to learn to dance. I am sure she would teach you.

Three Big S. O. Concerns May Get Together

Standard Oil of Jersey, California, Indiana a Logical Team

—By B. C. Forbes—

New York, Feb. 14—A much bigger oil merger than any yet mentioned may be arranged by Standard Oil companies, provided the Standard Oil of New York-Vacuum Oil combination is not forbidden by the United States Supreme Court.

B. C. Forbes

Isn't it ridiculous that foreigners should be permitted to operate all over the United States and that the same privilege should be denied American citizens? The Dutch Shell Union interests practically cover the world.

Walter C. Teagle, the mental (and physical) giant who leads Standard Oil of New Jersey, is, I understand, ambitious to create an American organization capable of doing business practically all over the United States.

If no legal obstacles are raised, I am told that the idea is to bring together the Standard Oil companies of New Jersey, California and Indiana.

The New Jersey company operates mainly in the East (in addition to its foreign ramifications), the California company operates in the West, while the Indiana company covers a large section of the Middle West. By hooking up the three, and then carrying out certain expansions, an enterprise of national scope would be created.

It became known long ago that Mr. Teagle and President Kenneth R. Kingsbury of the Standard Oil of California both saw very potent advantages in combining forces. No definite steps were taken because of uncertainty over the attitude of the courts. Now, however, that the Federal Statutory Court of St. Louis has indorsed the New York-Vacuum get-together, both Standard Oil concerns, prospects for the Teagle-Kingsbury plan have become distinctly brighter.

Inclusion of the Indiana company is now looked upon as extremely desirable. Nothing at all definite has as yet been arranged, but that is how the wind now blows.

The disintegration of the old Standard Oil Trust" has been more thorough than the public imagine. There is today in many directions as keen competition between Standard Oil companies as between any other oil rivals. Heads of S. O. companies are, for the most part, enterprising, wide-awake, aggressive fellows, each out to build up his own business. The success of each is not measured by what any other Standard Oil company accomplishes, but solely by the showing he can make for his own concern. Therefore, competition is greatly spread.

Stock ownership, too, is very different today from what it was in 1911, when "dissolution" was decreed. I am told that not 5 per cent of the Standard Oil of New Jersey stockholders of today owned a single share in 1911.

It is questionable whether any individual, not excepting John D. Rockefeller, owns stock in all the various existing Standard Oil companies. No longer can or does 26 Broadway crack the whip over the heads of the legations of Standard Oil executives scattered throughout the continent. True, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., retains some influence in a number of S. O. companies in which Rockefeller money is still invested. But I happen to know that he does not attempt to lay down the law to any of them. Once in a while he is appealed to when one Standard Oil company starts doing things another doesn't like, and on such occasions he does his best to act as conciliator. But the head of each company is his own boss, subject not to any Rockefeller but to his stockholders.

The prospective developments here outlined are not remotely likely to be effected tomorrow or the next day. But the trend is as here outlined for the first time.

If Congress were as eager to help business and employment as it is to play politics regardless of the soundness of its action or of the ultimate effect upon national prosperity, it would have overhauled our anti-trust laws long ago. These laws were drafted to fit the conditions existing a generation ago. They have been outgrown. They are anachronistic. Industry and business have traveled fast and far since the early years of this century. Bigness has been in no small measure responsible for the ability of American business organizations to outstrip the rest of the world.

Americans of the present generation know that mere bigness does not necessarily mean badness. They know that the lead in bettering the conditions of workers has been taken more often by large, strong corporations than by small concerns. They know that invention and research, which have added immeasurably to the convenience and comforts of us all, have been stimulated and supported by companies of magnitude.

Why, therefore, should not Congress modernize our laws governing industry and business?

Had no more progress been made by industry and business than has been made in formulating laws governing industry and business, this land would not today be so far ahead of the rest of the world.

SWIFT SECOND OF NAME TO HEAD PACKER

By FRANK H. MELOON

Gustavus F. Swift, new president of Boston-listed Swift & Co., is the second Gustavus F. Swift to head the packing concern. He succeeded his brother, Louis F. Swift, to that office when Louis was made chairman of the board and two other brothers, Edward F. and Charles H., were made vice chairmen. One other brother, Harold H., is a vice president. All are sons of the founder of the business, Gustavus Franklin Swift, who left a Cape Cod farm to found the family fortune at the Chicago stockyards.

Gustavus F. Swift

The new president is 50 years old and has been associated with the company for 30 years. He has been vice president and a director since 1916. He has four children and resides at 1551 Astor st., Chicago. The Swift family hasn't deserted the old home at Cape Cod. Some of them come there every summer to enjoy the fine New England season.

* * *

Those "live wires" of the railroad world, the Van Sweringen brothers, have ambitions for New England development, if they achieve their goal of adding Boston & Maine control to their portfolio. First it will be necessary, apparently, to oust the Pennsylvania interests, now in the saddle.

* * *

Stockholders are studying the possible effects. State Street is inclined to scout the idea that anyone can be found who will take over Pennroad holdings at the "Coolidge bull market" prices at which some of them were certainly acquired. That would appear too much like philanthropy.

* * *

Sudden enforced marketing of a large block of shares would be to depreciate paper values of other holdings. It would also be against Interstate Commerce Commission policie as pursued in the past. It is therefore doubtful if fear of such action, already entertained by some New Englanders, is justified.

* * *

Visualize the Boston & Maine as an integral part of a line extending from coast to coast, and perhaps later, like the big Canadian Pacific, even around the world, and you can see possible benefits to stockholders and the served sections.

* * *

Street railways appear to make general showing of more car mileage and fewer passengers carried. This is a trend not agreeable to increased revenues. Massachusetts Northeastern St. Ry. Co. is the latest to issue a report with this showing.

Northeastern's car mileage operated during last quarter of 1930 totaled 204,834 and passengers carried numbered 870,772, against car mileage of 192,456 and 558,521 passengers carried for the corresponding quarter of the preceding year. During the whole 1930, 781,457 car miles were operated and 2,626,988 passengers carried, against 870,209 car miles operated and 2,911,579 passengers carried during 1929.

* * *

Separate bookkeeping for Northeastern's toll bridge between Salisbury and Hampton, N. H., the longest of its kind in the world, would probably give us much more ple ing figures than those for Northeastern as a whole. At times last summer the congestion at this toll bridge was terrific.

Natural Gas Gain for 1931 Predicted

Chicago, Feb. 14—Natural gas usage probably will establish a new high record in 1931, it was said today by Albert E. Pierce, president of the Central Public Service Corporation.

"While natural gas has been available for many years it has only been in recent years that means were devised for transporting this fuel for long distances," Mr. Pierce pointed out.

"Last year saw probably the greatest extension of the natural gas pipe line systems to date and thousands of towns and cities were provided with this low cost fuel for the first time. They will use natural gas for a full year in 1931 and there will be the normal increase in consumption that always follows introduction of natural gas at lower rates.

"Therefore without any addition to facilities the send-out of natural gas should easily be the greatest in the nation's history. However, there are several very large pipe line systems still under construction that will be completed this year and these will open an even greater territory that will contribute substantially to the total usage."

Price changes, as a whole, were narrow in trading on the Boston Stock Exchange today. Edison Electric proved an exception, dropping nearly 5 points to 257.

Boston Elevated common eased a point to 71 and Old Colony Railroad closed the week at 130, down 1. In the most active issues Quincy Mining and Warren Brothers dipped fractionally and American Pneumatic second preferred added ½ at 10.

Eastern Steamship, National Service Company and North Butte were active and firm. Investment trust shares were slightly lower. Sales for the short session aggregated 22,536.

United Shoe and Union Twist Drill eased fractionally.

CURB MARKET IS RESISTANT

New York, Feb. 14—Closing prices on the curb market showed little or no change today, although considerable week-end realizing was in progress during most of the short session.

Resistance to selling, however, was evident and the list regained most of its losses in the last half hour.

Electric Bond & Share, Middle West Utilities, American Commonwealths "A," American & Foreign Power warrants, American Superpower and other utilities—the day's most active group—finished unchanged after recording narrow declines.

Oils eased. Vacuum hardened around 65, but at that quotation was off half a point net. Similar losses in Cities Service and Standard of Indiana and a one point drop in Gulf reflected the slackening of bullish interest in the petroleum shares after their improvement early in the week.

Richfield Leaders Call for Deposit

Bondholders' protective committee of Richfield Oil Co. of California is issuing a notice to holders of first mortgage and collateral trust bonds, Series A, convertible, urging them for their own protection to act immediately in depositing their bonds.

Plant of Weirton Steel to Resume

Weirton Steel Co.'s Clarksburg, W. Va., plant for tin plate, suspended recently for installation of electric motive equipment, will begin operations Monday with 400 men in the hot mills, and 600 more will be added as other departments resume 10 days later.

Week's Clearings Slightly Lowered

New York, Feb. 14—The New York Clearing House Association today reported exchanges during the week ended Feb. 14 amounted to $5,079,601,491, against $5,391,854,039 during the week ended Feb. 7.

Bond Market Stays in Narrow Groove

New York, Feb. 14—Still uncertain as to what effect the soldiers' bonus legislation may have on the bond market, traders were cautious in their bidding today, and price movement followed the narrow grooves made familiar this week.

Church to Hold Sale

A pre-Lenten penny sale will be held on Monday evening in St. Mary's Hall, Moon and Saratoga sts., East Boston.

Grains Are Mixed at Chicago Close

Chicago, Feb. 14—Trade in grains was moderate during the short session on the Chicago Board of Trade today, with price changes mixed at the close. Final prices for wheat were ⅛c lower to ⅝c higher, and corn ⅛c up to ⅝c off. Oats and rye were ⅛c lower to ⅛c higher.

$9,000,000 Merger for N. Y. Banks

Consolidation of First National and Merchants National banks of Middletown, N. Y., two of the oldest financial institutions in the district, announced. New bank will be capitalized at $9,000,000 and will be known as First Merchants National Bank & Trust Co.

Cotton Lower in New York Market

New York, Feb. 14—Cotton futures today closed 3 to 8 points lower: March 10.87, May 11.12-13, July 11.37-38, October 11.64-65, December 11.85, January 11.92. Spot quiet; middling 10.95.

Commercial Credit

Commercial Credit Co. in 1930 earned $2.03 a common share against $4.48 in 1929.

STOCKS MIXED IN WEEK-END DEALINGS

New York, Feb. 14—There was enough bullish enthusiasm to offset the effects of early profit taking in Wall Street today.

Closing prices showed about an even mixture of gains and losses, with narrow changes in leading issues. The market had a fairly steady tone at the finish. Temporary losses of 1 to 2 points in leading issues had been fairly general earlier. Transactions for the two-hour session were only about 1,100,000 shares.

LOEW'S A FAVORITE

Loew's was a bull favorite in the late trading, rising more than 3 points to a new high for the movement in active trading.

Union Pacific and Caterpillar Tractor gained about as much, and issues showing advances of around a point included Fox, Continental Can, Missouri Pacific, Baltimore & Ohio, and Gold Dust. A loss of nearly 2 points in American Telephone was regained, and that issue closed up a fraction.

Radio lost a point, presumably in response to the upholding by the Circuit Court of Appeals of the decision of the Federal District Court of Delaware against the patent pooling arrangement.

Westinghouse, American Water Works, Corn Products and Air Reduction lost about as much. U. S. Steel was off a fraction.

UTAH IS UP $24

A few odd lot transactions in Utah Copper carried that issue up 24 points. McCrory Stores "A" and "B" stocks were two other thinly traded issues making wide gains. They closed about 10 higher.

Strength of Utah Copper, which has been appearing on the market more often of late, presumably reflects the proposal in Washington to place a tariff on that metal. Ninety-eight per cent of Utah stock is held by Kennecott, so little is available for trading purposes.

The company is Kennecott's chief domestic producer. The company's other important operating subsidiary, Braden, works deposits in Chile, so a tariff might divert activity to Utah.

Week-end reports from the steel industry indicated little change in operating schedules next week. In the Youngstown area operations will be maintained at 50 per cent of capacity, as reduction of 5 per cent by Youngstown Sheet & Tube will be offset by gains elsewhere.

Trade reports indicated that steel buying had been a little better in the past few days, and hopes of maintaining or increasing prices for the second quarter were bolstered.

MONEY RATES ADVANCED

New York, Feb. 14 (AP)—In anticipation of a larger supply of bankers' acceptances coming into the market, dealers in New York and Boston today advanced their bill rates ⅛ of 1 per cent from the all-time low that has prevailed since the middle of last week.

The advance, which still leaves the rates considerably below those prevailing at the turn of the year, was announced by the American Acceptance Council.

The new rates are: Bills up to 90 days, 1½ per cent bid, 1⅜ asked; 120 days, 1⅝ bid, 1½ asked; 150 and 180 days, 1⅝ bid, 1⅝ asked.

Olds Production for Month Gains

February production of Olds Motor Works division of General Motors, which was raised 30 per cent above the original schedule, has been jumped to 50 per cent above the first schedule. This enhanced production will take care of only immediate demands.

HYGRADE LAMP CO.

D. E. N., Salem—Have you a copy of the annual report of Hygrade Lamp Co.? I understand this local plant is very prosperous. Let me know, please, something about its outlook.

Ans.—The Hygrade Lamp Company reports for the year ended December 31, 1930, consolidated net income of $697,408 after all charges. A reserve for customers' adjustments of $77,390 was also established out of 1930 earnings. After deducting preferred dividends balance is equal to $4.92 a share on 117,684 shares of common stock. This compares with net in 1929 of $519,909, or $3.41 a share on the common after deducting preferred dividends.

Balance sheet as of December 31, 1930, shows current assets of $1,994,507; current liabilities, $469,371; and working capital, $1,525,136. This compares with working capital of $992,658 on December 31, 1929. Of current assets, U. S. government obligations amounted to $832,121. A year ago company held none of these bonds.

President E. J. Poor says in part:

Radio tube inventory of last year has been greatly reduced so that the number of finished tubes on hand December 31, 1930, represented only two weeks' sales. Inventory of finished lamps represented only one month's sales.

"Cash position has been improved substantially during the year so that cash, U. S. government bonds and listed bonds on December 31 amounted to $1,139,191. The corresponding figure a year ago was $315,765.

"Company had no notes payable outstanding and no funded debt as of December 31, 1930.

"Lamp sales for 1930 in units were .7 of 1 per cent less than in 1929, but 10 per cent more than in 1928. Incandescent lamp business of the company is not subject to large fluctuations in volume from year to year on account of varying conditions of general business. Pioneering for the past two years in radio tube activities, particularly in engineering, development, and production of tubes, has resulted in a substantial increase in tube sales, especially during the fall months.

"Dividends received during 1930 from stock of Tung-Sol Lamp Works amounted to $64,325. As of December 31, company owned 9121 shares of Tung-Sol preferred and 27,808 shares of common.

"Although the radio tube industry in general has had an unprofitable year, company has been able to increase its sales and show an operating profit and reduce inventory of finished tubes. Prospects for the coming year are favorable."

Today's News of Live Stocks in Wall Street

Moderate week-end reactions were not sufficient to cause disappointment to veteran traders, particularly as they came after several sessions of noteworthy advances in Wall and State Streets. The public is admittedly more stock-minded than it has been for weeks, but professional buying has been responsible for most of the volume of transactions.

Expansions Made by More Brokers

One of the good signs is the number of expansions being made by brokerage houses. It indicates they are looking for an increase in public trading. The $50,000 advance in New York Stock Exchange seats this week was also another pointer in this direction.

Steel's Reaction Proves Moderate

A fair volume of selling orders appeared in U. S. Steel today, but the issue was well supported and the reaction proved moderate. Steel Corporation continues to add to its unfilled orders. That is a good sign. It means a substantial backlog for increased operations a little later. Unfilled tonnage has been on the increase since the latter part fo September, when it was 3,424,000 tons. It now is 4,132,000 tons, an increase of more than 20 per cent. Unfilled orders are almost as large as at times in 1928, 1929 and 1930 when operations were very close to 90 per cent at times, against less than 50 per cent now.

Radio Corp. Off on Court News

Radio Corporation soon lost about a point today on the federal court decision declaring the "patent pooling" with General Electric, etc., a violation of the anti-trust laws.

Bendix Shipments Have 10 P. C. Gain

January shipments of the products of the Bendix Brake Co., division of Bendix Aviation Corp., were 10 per cent above December, and the latter month was 16 per cent above those of November. This was revealed in a report issued today by Vincent Bendix, president of the parent corporation.

Business of the first week in February indicates that there will be a sharp increase in sales for the month, because of the various increased production schedules of the large automobile manufacturers, to whom the Bendix Brake Co. sells most of its products.

Gold Dust-Pillsbury Merger Discussed

From thoroughly reliable sources, it is stated that with assumption of control of Ward Baking Corporation by the Morrow interests it is to be expected that the flour business will go to Standard Milling, controlled by Gold Dust. The latter, of course, is one of the largest of the Morrow enterprises.

As a result of this probability, there is a revival of report concerning a merger between Gold Dust and Pillsbury. During the bad break of last December, the Morrow interests were big buyers of Pillsbury stock and this led to reports of a merger on a share-for-share basis. Officials of both companies discussed such a merger. It is understood that the chief executives of both companies are now in Florida.

New Pool Formed in Ludlum Steel

Sudden influx of favorable stories concerning Ludlum Steel can be attributed to the new pool which has just been formed in the stock.

Gillette Dividend May Be on $2 Rate

Directors of Gillette are reported to have under consideration establishments of the stock on a regular $2 annual dividend basis, although the auditors for the company have not yet recommended this action.

MUSIC, TALKS TODAY'S AIR FEATURES

The week-end offers many unusual radio programs. Over WNAC at 9 tonight as authentic Indian ritual will be broadcast for the first time from Niagara Falls, N. Y. The occasion is the initiation of Francis D. Bowman, reader of Indian legends, into the Deer Clan of the Tuscaroras. Chief Clinton Rickert will preside as 50 of his tribesmen take part in the ceremony which will be heard in the native tongue. Included in the ceremonies will be the tom-toms and the singing of Indian ceremonial songs.

Richard Crooks, operatic star, will initiate a series of Vigaro broadcasts heard tomorrow over WEEI at 3:30. The series is designed to present old songs of universal appeal by well-known artists. Successive Sundays will bring to the microphone Mario Chamlee, tenor, Charles Hackett, baritone, and Albert Spaulding, violinist.

Over WEEI at 9:15 p. m. tomorrow, Frederick Jagel, Metropolitan opera tenor, will be heard in a program of operatic and concert songs.

The 70th birthday of Charles Martin Loeffler, American composer, will be observed by the New York Philharmonic Symphony orchestra, when, from 3 to 5 p. m. tomorrow, during its concert, it presents his "A Pagan Poem." Heinrich Gebhard, pianist, will play the solo parts of the work.

THE MYSTERY OF GERALDINE

est the commissioner. The woman had come to his shop and taken the locksmith up the hill and to the house on Peddler's rd.

The door was standing open. It was fitted with an old-fashioned lock and the woman said the key was lost. Could he make her another? As Colt pointed out, she must have first burglarized the house through the broken kitchen window. The man-to removed the lock, took it back to the shop, found an old key which he filed, came back and refitted the lock into the front door, all in the space of a few hours.

"Thanks," said Thatcher Colt, making a memorandum of the name and address. "You will hear from me later."

Again he drove downtown and this time we stopped in front of the Esplanade apartments on Morningside Heights. A strange thrill stirred in my veins as I mounted the stone steps. This was once the dwelling place of a girl whose death we still sought to solve, but also it was, until recently, the home of another girl who had come to dominate my thoughts. But Betty had moved from here now and was living on Tenth st.

Promptly Thatcher Colt sought out our old acquaintance, the janitor. Still sagging, as if he were sitting on an invisible stool, and still in his ragged clothing, the janitor received us sullenly.

"Who showed Apartment 4-D to prospective tenants?" was the commissioner's question.

We were referred to the elevator operator. He explained that a sign had been hung out stating that an apartment was for sublet, but the Christmas season was bad for new rentals and there had been only one person interested.

"Do you remember who it was?" asked Thatcher Colt.

The elevator operator remembered perfectly.

Forged Note

"It was a lady," he said, "with blue eyes and blonde hair."

Blue eyes and blonde hair! To whom was this leading us?

"Can you remember the woman more accurately?"

"Well, she was about as tall as your friend there."

I am about five feet nine inches tall.

"Was she pretty?"

"I didn't get a good look at her face," said the operator. "She kept her coat muffled up about her face both times she was here."

"Oh, she was here twice?"

"Yes. The first time she came about two or three weeks before Christmas. The girls were not at home, but I showed her around."

"Did you leave here alone in the apartment?"

"Yes."

"You are not supposed to, but you did. Is that right?"

"Yes."

Thatcher Colt turned to me with an amused smile.

"You see," he said, "that was the time the lady had the opportunity to steal the pen and some of paper."

"Nothing was ever reported missing! I guessed the boy, but Thatcher Colt waved that aside.

"When did she come again?"

"About five o'clock in the afternoon of Christmas Eve. She said she thought she would take the apartment, but she wanted another chance to look at it."

"The apartment being vacant was a stroke of luck for the lady we are after," muttered the Commissioner. "This time she brought back the torn piece of the note she had forged. You see, Tony, we have to reckon with the fact that this woman was clever enough to be a forger. Probably she obtained a sample of Geraldine's writing as Geraldine's mysterious correspondent, wanting genealogical information. And she planted those torn papers on the second visit. Then she went down to Doctor Maskell's suite—and I wonder what happened there?"

I left Thatcher Colt at his home and went to my own bachelor quarters for some needed sleep. The next day Thatcher Colt occupied himself with affairs that were an enigma to me.

Early in the morning, he sent for Cleslerk, his favorite among the chemists attached to the department, and had a long consultation with him. But I knew nothing of the business of that interview until midnight. I did notice, however, that when Cleslerk left the Commissioner's office, he carried with him a sealed envelope that in his hand was a small red object, trimmed with gold, and that he promised to see the perfumers.

But I had no time to speculate. There were stacks of neglected department work on my desk; the Foster case had taken much of my time, while I served as aide-de-camp to the commissioner. Yet now it was hard for me to concentrate. All my interest lay in the new develop ments in the murder mystery. Nor did it lessen my curiosity when Thatcher Colt paused at my desk later in the afternoon and rested a hand confidentially on my shoulder.

"I am beginning to see daylight at last, Tony," he divulged. "There is only one thing left to bother me."

He patted his hands together and walked out of the room, his sombre brown eyes fixed in a stare like that of a medium in a trance. Sometimes, when Thatcher Colt was thus moody and silent, it seemed to me that he drew upon some intangible power of inspiration, be illumination, to light up the dark corners of vexing crimes. But he stoutly scouts the possibility or such phenomena. Logic and observation explain it all, he declares.

Nevertheless, I do not believe that logic explains all that Thatcher Colt discovered as he grappled with that invisible antagonist who had, apparently, sought to the murder of Geraldine Foster, to perpetrate the perfect crime—and had very nearly succeeded.

I was deep in my work, when suddenly Thatcher Colt entered and again touched me on the shoulder.

"Tony," he said, "stop your work."

I looked up and he smiled whimsically.

"I have the honor to report," he said, "that I have finally solved the Geraldine Foster murder case."

Case Solved

A strange meeting was held that night at the house on West 70th st.

So extraordinary was the gathering that had they known it, reporters would have descended en masse on the house of the commissioner, Franklin at the whispered reports of new developments in the Foster case.

No one would tell what was afoot, nor did they learn that all the witnesses had been hurriedly summoned and were now surrolled in one of the chambers on the second floor of the commissioner's house. Among them were Mr. and Mrs. Foster and their adopted son, Hector, together with Betty Canfield, Harry Armstrong, Mrs. Haberhorn and several others who would not have been recognized by the reporters at all—especially a pert, with bustle-ish, a voluble and protesting Italian barber and a locksmith. The doors of the house were guarded by patrolmen.

But an infinitely stranger gathering was held in the library of the police commissioner.

In front of the desk sat George Maskell, prim and precise, his finger tips together, his chin lost in his huge, upstanding collar. Across from him sat his wife Natalie, looking pale and august and beautiful. Between them, grim and thoughtful, sloulched the prisoner, Dr. Humphrey Maskell.

Prof. Mather

There are many who do not believe in the professor's theory of evolution, holding as he does that man has steadily climbed to his present position from a lower form of beast. Geology, the professor holds tells the story of progress from the simplest forms of life to the present types including man. A concert will be supplied by the Mc-Manus-Shaw Trio.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

"Soul" is the subject of the lesson-sermon which will be read in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow.

The golden text is: "I have longed for Thy salvation, O Lord; and Thy law is my delight. Let my soul live, and it shall praise Thee; and let Thy judgments help me." (Psalms 119: 174, 175.)

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "Yea, in the way of Thy judgments, O Lord, have we waited for Thee; the desire of our soul is to Thy name, and to the remembrance of Thee" (Isaiah 26:8).

The lesson-sermon also includes passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health With Key to the Scriptures."

AT THE ADVENT

The Rev. Charles S. Hutchinson, D. D., rector of St. John's Church, Newport, R. I., will conduct a Quiet Day at the Church of the Advent, Ash Wednesday, February 15. There will be addresses after the 10 o'clock Mass, and at 2 and 4 o'clock in the afternoon.

The special Lenten services include a course of instructions each Wednesday evening, at 8 o'clock, on "Prayer, Private and Public," following the solemn Litany, and a mission service each Friday evening at the same hour, with a series of sermons on the same theme by the Rev. Julian D. Hamlin, rector of the parish.

SHOULD HUSBAND RULE?

The Rev. J. Whitcomb is treating the marriage relations at Tremont Temple. His spirited prelude questions asked and answered each Sunday evening are dealing with this same subject. Among other things, tomorrow evening he will give his answer to "Why do men neglect their wives?" "Should the old-fashioned whipping post be revived?" "Quiet the husband be head of the home?" "Do boys follow the example of father more than mother?" On the morning Dr. Brougher will take for his theme, "Billy Sunday and His Power?" Dr. Brougher is a personal friend of Billy Sunday, and will tell of a visit he made with the Evangelist to the University of Pennsylvania, and regults that followed.

FEDERATION TO OPEN IN OLD SOUTH

Postponement of noonday lenten meetings conducted by the Greater Boston Federation of Churches for one week has been caused by the closing temporarily of the Tremont Theater. The Federation announces their meetings to begin Tuesday, February 21, instead of next Monday, as originally planned. The appearance of Billy Sunday this coming week has undoubtedly been a contributing factor. The meetings for the third part of Lent will be in the Old South Meeting House on Washington st. On Tuesday, the 24th, Col. Joseph Atkinson of the New England area of the Salvation Army will be the speaker. The Salvation Army band will provide music.

If not in sympathy with an organization to which I belong, what attitude should I take? 3. What effect does unnecessary secular work on Sunday have upon the individual? 4. What is open-mindedness? 5. Herewith is the solution of yesterday's puzzle.

PORT OF BOSTON

By JAMES J. DELANEY

Refusal of longshoremen to work on the loading of a large cargo of grain in the Greek steamer Issidora pending the payment of a fine levied for alleged violation of the rules regarding the fitting of the ship for carrying grain, delayed the work.

While the steamer was laying in quarantine for several days awaiting a loading berth, the crew were put to work putting in the shifting boards and other fittings. She was moved up to the berth at Pier 4 the day before, but work did not start until yesterday.

When the longshoremen learned that the shifting boards and fittings were put in by non-union labor they declined to work on the ship. Conference of union leaders resulted in a fine of $750.

Reduction of the fine to $200 caused George N. Condylis, the owner, who happened to be on board, to pay it rather than further delay loading.

CARGO RUINED

Much of the Boston cargo in the hold of the steamer Commercial Mariner from Boston by way of Philadelphia for New Orleans, Mobile and Tampa, which sank in the Delaware river after a collision with the steamer San Simeon, was ruined, it became known here after the ship had been raised. She is badly damaged and will be out of commission for some time.

GUARDIAN TIED UP

After years in patrolling the harbor, the old police boat Guardian which outlived her usefulness as a harbor patrol craft, is tied up at Lawley's Yard, Neponset. Her successor the Stephen O'Meara has already had her trial run. The Guardian was sold some months ago to Mark Angel.

SINGING BIRDS

Feathered songsters from the Hertz Mountains Germany, whose notes are making merry music as the big White Star liner Scythia makes her way to this port where she will arrive at the first of the week. The big liner will leave passengers here and at New York.

BIG MARKET

Monday's market is expected to make a record showing at the Fish Pier, officials state, because of the mild weather. With the Lenten season opening Wednesday next week there be a big demand for the fares of the fishermen. As long as the weather is holding good the fleet on the grounds is taking every advantage. Late week receipts continued good, as more than a half million pounds was recorded in the catches of 15 trawlers and draggers.

JEKYLL-HYDE MYSTERY

recognized him in Holt and yet held their tongue.

Muenter was born in Uelzen, Germany, on March 25, 1871. His parents were in moderate circumstances. When he was 7 years of age he went to the gymnasium in Uelzen and remained there for 10 years, being well grounded, particularly in languages.

He turned out to be a remarkable linguist. He knew Gaelic as a scholar knows that curious tongue and in later years believed that a great world language could be constructed by melding Gaelic and German, preserving the best parts of each.

WORLD LANGUAGE

It is not a dream which would appeal to most German scholars in these days, very probably. Acquaintances of Muenter at Harvard told me he used to talk to himself in this queer lingual hodgepodge.

He even set about building a foundation for his world language, constructing a vocabulary and grammar. When other teachers and students declined to take interest in the conception, he displayed vexation, sometimes anger. Dunderheads, he called them, and plodded on with his work.

In the late eighties and early nineties, there was considerable German immigration to the United States. Muenter's parents were caught in this western-flowing current. Just what year they came is uncertain. Records of the Cambridge police have it that the Muenters landed in America in 1892.

The family went to Chicago and young Muenter began teaching German for a livelihood. In 1895, he entered the University of Chicago and was graduated in 1899 with the degree of bachelor of arts. While studying in Chicago he taught French and German in preparatory schools, at Racine College and the Kenwood School.

He gave instruction in German in South Side Academy, an affiliated school of Chicago University, from 1897 to 1900. At this time, young Muenter appeared to be perfectly normal in mind and body. His instructors praised him for untiring industry.

KEPT HIS SECRET

Among the friends he made during this period of his life was Prof. Chester Nathan Gould of the Germanic department of the University of Chicago. Years later, when Muenter, as an instructor at Cornell, under the name of Frank Holt, encountered Prof. Gould in an office of that university, he gave Gould a blank stare, and the Chicago professor remained silent. He saw no reason then or later to expose the man's real identity.

They saw, as they thought, that he was trying to live honorably and usefully. They were not sure that he was guilty of the murder of his wife. They believed in all fairness it was their duty to forget that Erich Muenter had ever walked the earth.
